WASHINGTON, April 13 .- [Special.]-As the sint rays of morning light peered through the ndow of the unassuming house upon Capitol Hill and lit upon the form of the stricken tesman, the body turned, a gray gleam of morning light illuminated the yet handsome at emaciated face, and in that ray the life of Samuel J. THE PEOPLE GRIEVE.

As the day opened and the people appeared upon the streets, they were met with the sad intelligence that the soul of the great democratic commoner had losed its mantle of earth, and passed to the great hereafter. A spirit of gloom and sadness overspread the city, and over the masses of people who later wended their way churchward, there was a lack of brightness and buoyancy. Indeed, all Washington has been in tears. No man who has ever served in the halls of congress, was ever so beloved as Randall. In all the churches prayers went up for his stricken family.

In his death the democratic party loses its reatest leader, the south its truest friend, and the country one of its greatest men.

HE DIED A CHRISTIAN. "Mr. Randall died a Christian," said Postmaster-General Wanamaker, who was at his bedside when life expired. "He was baptised three months ago, and his conversion was in no sense a death-bed conversion. Indeed, he worked out his salvation as methodically as he would have worked out an appropriation bill, and he gave the reasons for his faith in the same clear, logical manner that he would have given his reasons for his belief in a line of pub-E. W. B. lie policy."

Told by the Associated Press. It was a sad and touching scene at the Randall residence on Capitol Hill when Congressman Samuel J. Randall expired this morning, just as the bells of a a neighboring church were tolling 5 o'clock. Around the bedside were gathered the family, the physician and Postmasier General Wanamaker, who had all kept constant watch over the dying man during the night. At a few minutes before his death he opened his eyes, and looking tenderly at his wife, said in a low tone: "Mother," the word instinctive with all the fondest recollections of their long and happy married life, and by which he always called his wife when none but the family were near.

He looked into her eyes, as if he were about to say something more, but he seemed to have no strength left, and in a few moments he had passed away.

Death had come with the coming of dawn, and the watchers saw that all was over, and the brave wife and daughter, who had nursed and cared for him during his long illness, could restrain their feelings no longer, but gave way to their grief, while the physician nd Mr. Wanamaker endeavored to console them as best they might, though their own grief hardly permitted them to speak.

THE HISTORY OF HIS ILLNESS.

Mr. Randall's death had been expected at e during the past three days, and his family and friends knew that he could not last much longer. The physicians had informed the family that death might come almost any hour, and last night they told Mrs. Randall that his endurance could not prolong his life through another day.

Friday night had been a bad one for the sick man, and he had several sinking spells, from which he rallied, to the astonishment of his physicians. These, however, left him weaker, and when morning came it was evi-dent that his extraordinary vitality had almost left him.

He rested easily and comfortably during the He rested easily and comfortably during the fore part of the day, and the doctor was encourged to hope that lie might live several days yet. He took some nourishment and dozed off without any difficulty. Shortly after 3 o'clock, however, a marked change was noticed in his appearance, and he seemed almost to sink away. This spell was worse than any of the preceding ones, and it was though, that the end was at hand. All the members of the family were present, and also Dr. Mallan, who has attended Mr. Randall throughout his illness, and who has grown to have an interest in the case. lam, who has attended Mr. Randall throughout his illness, and who has grown to have an interest in the case almost as great as one of the family. Dr. F. M. Lincoln, consulting physician, and Postmaster-General Wanamaker were hastily summoned. They temained around the bedside, expecting each moment would be the last, until 6 o'clock, when he rallied somewhat from the state of collapse. It left him with very little strength remaining and Dr. Mallan became convinced that he could hardly live through the night. Dr. Lincoln left shortly after 6 o'clock, but the other remained with the sick man. There was little or no change up to midnight, except that he was steadily growing weaker. Young sammy Randall went to a neighbor's house to seep, but was hastily summoned about 3 o'clock in the morning, when the doctor informed the family that. seep, but was hastily summoned about clock in the morning, when the doctor in-formed the family that Mr. Randall could not the night. He was in a state of formed the family that Mr. Randall could not live through the night. He was in a state of semi-unconsciousness all the time.

About 3 o'clock he had another sinking spell, and afterward his mind became more clear and bright. The sick man lay in the front room on the second story of his modest home, and daylight was just beginning to shed its rays into the sick room, when Mr. Randall opened his eyes, and looked tenderly at his wife. He recognized her, and in a half whisper he said simply, "mother."

He then closed his eyes, and sank away death coming from exhaustion, as the bells of the near by church rang the hour of five, to call the worshipers to early mass.

He was dead.

Mr. Randall's death was painless, and he ras unconscious during the hour of five, to have made the seminary of the near by church rang the hour of five, to have made the more considered when the seminary is the was dead.

Mr. Randall's death was painless, and he was unconscious during the greater part of his late hours. There were intervals when, from the intelligent and steady gaze which he directed at those about him, he must have been conscious, but he seemed unable to speak, and the word "mother" was the only one he utfered for hours preceding his death. This word he murmured so low that the only one who recognized what he said was his dampter.

word he murmured so low that the only one who recognized what he said was his daughter, who was kneeling just behind him.

Around him were Mrs. Susan Randall, Mrs. Lancaster, his married daughter, her daughter, Sam Randall, Dr. Mallan, Postmaster General Wanamaker, and the household servants.

For a moment the family hardly realized that all was over, but then, as the fact that he was dead broke upon them, they gave away to their grief, and burst into tears. The shock was especially severe to Mrs. Randall and her daughter, Susan, who, rejecting all offers of assistance, have nursed the husband and father through his illness of almost two years' duration. Their grief was touching in the extreme, and the gentlemen present allowed them to indulge it alone for some minutes. Postanaster General Wanamaker came out of the house a few minutes after 5, and announced, in an almost choking voice, that all was over. He and the others then endeavored to comfort the afflicted family, and at length succeeded in inducing them to retire, and try to refresh themselves with sleep.

MR. RANDALL'S ILLNESS.

Mr. Randall's illness dates back about five years, when Dr. Thomas F. Mallan, who has attended him throughout his later illness, was called in to treat him for gout July 9th, almost two years ago, Mr. Randall was suddenly seized with a violent diarrhes and hemorrhage during the night, due to hastily eating a dish of ice cream and berries during the day. This hemorrhage was so severe as to hemorrhage during the night, due to hastily eating a dish of ice cream and berries during the day. This hemorrhage was so severe as to completely prostrate him, and his life was in imminent danger. Dr. Mallan says that for some time previous to this, Mr. Randall had been troubled with what he supposed were hemorrhoids. The diarrhoral attack caused the disease to assume an active form, and it was found that he was suffering from an extensive and malignant abcess. This caused serious hemorrhages, which greatly depleted his system and left him weak and emaclated. He put himself permanently under the physician's care, and Dr. Mallan has attended him constantly while he was in this city, Dr. N. S. Lincoln, a physician of great repute in this city, being called into consultation occasionally. Mr. Randall rallied and grew stronger, and was getting on fairly well until last February, when he had a severe rigor, brought on probably by the weather. This rigor was accompanied by severe abdominal pains, and there were symptoms of peritonitis. From this time exhaustion began to set in, and the sick man's course was downward. Septisimia was also present, and a chill, and then diarrhosa about two weeks ago, brought the case to a critical stage.

the case to a critical stage.

Up to short a time ago Mr. Randall had confidence in his ability to pull through his sickness, and told a congressional visitor that he thought he was mending, and that he would be able to resume his congressional duties.

HE JOINED THE CHURCH.

He joined the Presbyterian church about two months ago. Mr. Wanamaker spoke to him on this subject, and Mr. Randall replying that he had been thinking of this matter for some time, and would like to become a member of the subject. ber of the church. Arrangements were effected by which he entered the Metropolitan Presby-terian church on Capitol Hill. Dr. Chester is pastor, and will probably conduct the funeral services in this city.

THE NEWS ABROAD.

The news of Mr. Randall's death became quite generally known during the day. It was expected, and therefore was not so much quite generally known during the day. It was expected, and therefore was not so much of a shock, as it otherwise would have been. A large number of persons called at the residence during the day to express their condolence. They were received by Mr. Lancaster, son-in-law. The president and Mrs. Harrison sent a basket of flowers with a note expressing deep sympathy with the family. Speaker Reed called during the afternoon. He expressed his regrets, and to learn the wishes of the family with respect to the faneral services, and informed Mr. Lancaster that he would carry out the wishes of the family in all things. Among other callers were Secretary Blaine, ex-Schator Gerry, of Michigan, who stood rext to Mr. Randall during the electoral count proceedings; ex-Speaker Carlisie, Representatives Breck-inbridge, Kentucky; Springer, Illinois, and many others.

Sergeant-at-Arms Helmes called, and took charge of the remains for the house of representatives. They were embalmed and placed in a casket in the room in which Randall It is said that the dead man presents a life like appearance, except that he is emaciated and wasted to a remarkable degree.

At 10 o'clock tonight Mr. Wanamaker said that the funeral had been fixed for Thursday morning. The arrangements will be in charge of the congressional committee to be appointed of the congressional committee to be appointed tomorrow morning. Mrs. Randall prefers that the services shall be held in the church of which Mr. Randall was a member, and not in the house of representatives. This church is the Metropolitan Presbyterian church (Dr. Chester, pastor), at the corner of Fourth and B streets. Nine or two o'clock will be the hour forced for the corner of the corner streets. Nine of two o clock will be the nour fixed for the services. After the coremonies the funeral party will take a special train over the Pennsylvania railroad to Philadelphia, where the inferment will take place in Mr. Randall's family vault in Laurel Hill cemetery. Brief services will be held there. The train is not expected to go into the city, but will stop at Ridge avenue church. Opinions About Mr. Randall.

Opinions About Mr. Kandall.

[Expressions of regret at Randall's death are universal and sincere. None paid him higher tributes of admiration and respect than his democratic colleagues in the house who differed with him vitally upon one of the most fered with him vitally upon one of the most important measures in congress.

Representative Roger Q. Mills had not heard of Randall's death when the Associated Press reporter called about 1 o'clock, and asked, his opinion of Randall. Mr. Mills spoke feelingly and earnestly.

"He was a very great man," said he, "a man of unimpeachable integrity and a natural born leader of men. He had more of the elements of leadership than any man I have come in contact with since I have been in public life. Nothing but his view on the tariff could have prevented him from being the leader of have prevented him from being the leader of the democratic party. If it had not been for that he would have been nominated for president in 1876, and," said Mr. Mills, with emphasis, "the would have been elected and seated, for he would have asserted his rights. When he believed his opinions right he would have been elected and seated, but he would have asserted his rights. When he believed his opinions right he would never change them, no matter what might happen. I never saw such determination. When he set his lips and brought down that great jaw of his, nothing could change him. Why, when our tatiff bill was up I pleaded with him—uuged and begged him to make some concessions and compromise, but he believed he was right, and could not be moved. lieved he was right, and could not be moved. When all his party except Bowden and one or two others had come over, he still held out, and would not move. That was the only thing on which we differed. There is nothing good and great you cannot say for me about Mr. Randall. I esteemed him highly. My feelings towards him were of the kindest, and I had great admiration and personal attachment for him."

Speaker Reed said: "It would be useless to try and express, in a few words, my sense of

I had great admiration and personal stractument for him."

Speaker Reed said: "It would be useless to try and express, in a few words, my sense of the great loss which we all feel in Randall's death. My esteem for him was very great, and I have always had and expressed the highest admiration for his steadfastness and courage. He was a good friend, a brave man, and a statesman beyond reproach."

Mr. Carlisle, who was just returning from a visit to the Randall residence, said: "My personal acquaintance with Mr. Randall began when I entered the forty-fifth congress, in October, 1877. Since then our relations have been not only friendly, but quite intimate. Although we differed widely upon some very important subjects, we never allowed these differences to interfere with our friendship, I-have always regarded him as an honest man in public life, and he was undoubtedly a man who had strong convictions and the courage to stand by them. I think that his death is a great loss to his party and to the country, and that he deserves to be remembered for his great public services."

Major McKinley said the death of Samuel J. Randall takes out of public life one of the ablest and purest of our statesmen. He was a great man, and for twenty-five years has been a positive force in national affairs. During all his long service in the house, amid the fiercest conflicts, when passion ruled, Mr. Randall was always true to his country, to his convictions, and his constituents, making everything yield to his convictions of public duty.

He was a natural leader of men. No man could have been a greater one. He will be missed in the nation's councils. Few men

JOHN J. INGALLS

VENTS HIS SPLEEN UPON MEN AND HE ATTACKS MR. CLEVELAND,

And Declares Himself in Favor of Thorough Party Corruption in Order to Re-tain Power.

NEW YORK, April 13.-[Special.]-In a three-page profusely illustrated interview, printed in the New York World today, Senator Ingalls makes some rather pithy statements. In speaking of the two political parties, he says:

The republicans and the democrats are as irrec oncliably opposed to each other as were Grant and Lee in the Wilderness. They use ballots instead of guns, but the struggle is as unrelenting and desperate, and the result as serious for the same. In war it is lawful to defeat the adversary to hire Hessians, to purchase mercenaries to mutilate, to kill, to destroy. The commander who lost a battle through the activity of his moral nature would be the derision of history. This cant about the corruption of politics is folly in the extreme. It proceeds from the tea custard and syllabub dilet-

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY. His opinion of the Democratic party is expressed thusly: pressed thusly:

The democratic party, having neither conscience nor defined principles in it, ably allies itself with discontent, and is arrayed against social order. It is strongest where public and private morality is weakest. Its citidels are in the south, where society is distinctly founded, and the constant and criminates the constant and criminates. and in great cities where the ignorant and criminal elements are most energetic. It has no be-liefs, maxims of formulas. Its creed is the instruction of Jefferson, that in a popular the instruction of Jefferson, that in a popular government, wealth, intelligence and morality are ultimately no match for numbers. For twenty-five years its only policy has been to complain, to oppose, to deny, to protest and ultimately to acquiesce in what the republicans have done. So when Cleveland came in, without plans, purpose or policy, his administration floundered pittably. Both in domestic and foreign affairs it was mptible in many things and feeble in all, and left absolutely no impression whatever upon history, except in the matter of vetoing bills for pensions and public buildings. It followed re-publican methods and carried on republican ideas, so that when Harrison was inaugurated it was as if a stich had been dropped merely, and we have kept right along with our work.

He then says that Cleveland will be the democratic nominee in '92.

"Democracy," he says, "never had such an ideal exponent and representative." CRITICISING CLEVELAND.

Then he proceeds to vent his spleen upon Cleveland in this wise:

His dull, heavy, ponderous wooden platitudes, laboriously written out and committed to memory; his stolid and shallow conciet, his affectatio of wisdom, purity and patriotism, and what he calls his solemn sense of duty, impress the average democrat with a feeling of reverence like that which the Chinese laundryman feels for his joss. In speaking of the interests of the country cal, and they should be unified. Their alliance upon all matters affecting their natural welfare, is nevitable. If they coalesce they will be invinci-le. We shall hold the purse and wield the sword of the nation, and we shall use them, not for op-pression, but for justice. The valleys of the Mis-sissippi and Missouri, with their tributaries from the Yellowstone to the gulf, form a magnificent empire that must have a homogeneous population and a common destiny.

Then he says:

Our destiny is continental. The Monroe doctrine is written on every map of the United States. The tendency to absorption is irreistible. The process will be peaceful, but our northern boundary must be the Artic circle, and our southern the Isthmus capal.

AS TO GRANDSON HARISON. Of Harrison's administration he says: Harrison's administration has been much m successful thus far than Cleveland's was at the end of his first year. Cleveland satisfied nobody was openly and unsparingly denounced by his party organs. It is a great mistake for a president to suppose that, by neglecting his friends, he can propitiate his enemies.

Uleveland got no support from the republican party by allowing republicans to remain in office, and he alienated many democrats. The most formidable error of Harrison is in regarding himself as known to fellow a persistent regarding himself regarding hims self as bound to follow a pernicious precedent Cleveland saw his blunder a year too late to enable Cleveland saw his blunder a year too late to enable him to recover. Most men are human, and prefer that reform should be tried on their enemies, rather than on themselves, and if President Harrison acts on this line, he will have no trouble. It is too early to predict what the verdict will be. The statistics do not exist. Two years hence will be soon enough. He has had a rocky time so far but hear tisines do not exist. Two years nence will be soon chough. He has had a rocky time so far, but has acquitted himself with dignity, courage and prudence. His temperament is dispassionate, and he is not sympathetic nor responsive, but his ideas are high, and I am confident that he will grow constantly in public estimation and approval. THE PENSION ROLL. Speaking of pensions, he says: According to the tables of mortality, the last surviving soldier of the war for the union will expire between 1940 and 1950, but the pension roll will rapidly diminish long before that time. Pensions to widows and dependent relatives will, however, continue for a much longer period. Before the account is finally closed, I think the overnment will have paid not less than four housand million dollars.

He then says should the democratic party be restored to power, he would not be surprised if ex-confederates are pensioned.

SENATOR VANCE'S EX-SLAVÉ Found Murdered, the Victim of a Bruta

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 13.- [Special.]-A horrible murder was committed three miles west of this city last night. Harriet Williams, Vance's family, was found lying upon the floor in her house, at 7 o'clock this morning, unconscious, and died in two hours without uttering a word. Several terrible wounds were liscovered on the body, three on the forehead and the top of her head showing the full length blade of an ax, which lay beside the body. The murder was evidently the work of a Six Hundred Teachers Will Attend.

RALRIGH, N. C., April 13.—[Special.]—Secretary Harrell, of the Southern Educational Association, says the date fixed for the first meeting is July 1st to 5th, both inclusive, at Morehead City, N. C. The date is so fixed as not to conflict with the meeting of the National Educational Association, which begins July 18th, and a number of teachers from the southern association will also attend the national association. The secretary reports that the southern association is rapidly gaining strength, and that every southern state will be represented. It is believed that six hundred teachers will attend.

TURPIN NEXT TO GO.

REED AND HIS PIRATES STILL AT THEIR DIRTY WORK.

THE M'COMAS BILL TO PASS.

With the Assistance of the Senate They Will Put Congressional Elections in the South Under Republicans.

Washington, April 13.—[Special.]—George Wise makes the fifth democrat who has been turned out of this house by Reed and his pirate gang. The present congress opened with three republican majority. The new states made it eight and the five democrats who have been unseated to make room for republicans increases to majority of the republican party to eighteen.

Turpin, of Alabama, who must get out to make room for McDuffie. Turpin had 14,000 majority, but that makes no difference to the republicans. They looked over the census of '80 and found the negroes were in the majority in the district. Hence they say the negro vote was suppressed; that had the blacks all voted McDuffie would have been elected; therefore, McDuffie is entitled to the seat and Turpin must go. This is the republican argument, and this is the ground upon which Turpin is to lose his seat. It was a straightout steal, but the republican party seems to have no principle. Their sole object is gain, whether it be by fair or foul means.

THE M'COMAS BILL TO BECOME A LAW.
With the good majority the republicans now have they are ready to commence on partisan legislation and legislation to perpetuate their power. The McComas anti-gerrymandering bill has been reported favorably and they have decided to make it a law. It is to prevent redistricting in any state this year, providing that all congressmen must be elected this fall from the districts as constituted when the elections of members of the present congress took place. It also provides for state returning boards to certify to the clerk of the house of representatives as to the members who were elected from the various states.

THEIR PARTISAN PLANS MAPPED OUT. Then the present plan of the republicans is to add to this bill in the shape of amendments, all the features in the Lodge national election law bill, which will provide for federal super-visors and troops, if deemed necessary, around the polls, and for state returning boards to be appointed by the federal government, thus taking away the feature of congressional electhem in charge of republican federal officials. This is their partisan plan as mapped out at present. The republican party is in a posi-tiou where it cannot hope to gain. All its leaders desire is to hold what they now have—to hold what they have won by fraud and corruption. They have the senate and know that they can hold that for years to come. They want a similar cinch, so to speak, in the house and executive, and are willing to resort to any-thing to get it, and all political discussions from now on are to be sectional in character. The plan is to make it appear to the country that the south is bordering on a state of rebellion; that votes are suppressed by the thousands and hundreds of thousands, and that such legislation as the McComas and Lodge bills are necessary for the good of the republic. However, whether or not Tom Reed and his partisan pirates can pull the wool over the eyes of the people, these bills combined in one are to become laws if such a thing be possible, and from the successful record of the republicans in this congress there can be no doubt of its possibility.

LITTLE HOPE FOR DEMOCRACY IN CONGRESS. Thus the heavy and light guns of the republican party are alike trained upon the south. They are determined to enact all leg-islation calculated to suppress the whites of the south in the interest of negro and carpet-bagger domination. It is to be a fight between the people of the south and the republican party. The southern representation here will make a strong fight, but with the large and well organized republican majority there seems but little hopes in the hall of congress for the democracy. It remains for the people to stand together shoulder to shoulder, throwing aside all other questions, to overthrow this rule or ruin party, which seems determined to pull down the people of the south, and make the carpet-bagger and the negro dominant. The republican party here will stop at nothing while they remain in power.

THE INTERNATIONAL TRIP.

The Itinerary of the Delegates Through the South.

Washington, April 18.—The business of the international American conference is so far advanced that there is little doubt that the delegates can leave for the excursion through the south at midnight, Friday 18th, as originally planned. About one-half have already arranged to take the trip, and several others will doubtless decide to postpone their departure for home for that purpose, so that the party will consist of about forty persons. Arrangements for transportation have been completed, and the special train will be similar to that used on the northern excursion last fall, the finest that can be secured. The plans of entertainment in several of the cities to be visited have been submitted, and the programmes will be completed, and printed as soon as the remainder are heard from. The following telegram was received from New Orleans:

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS.

Time of the House.

Washington, April 13.—Under the terms of Hoar's notice, given last Friday, the senate is to be asked to sit Monday until the Montana election case shall be disposed of, but the decision of that case will probably go over until Tuesday, as the senate is expected to adjourn tomorrow upon the announcement of the death of Mr. Randall. In ansouncing his intention to ask the senate to sit "out" the election case tomorrow, Mr. Hoar stated that the republicans had no intention of further discussing it.

election case tomorrow, Mr. Hoar stated that the republicans had no intention of further discussing it.

Senator Hawley, at the first opportunity, will call up the world's fair bill. He may get it before the senate in the morning hour Tuesday, and if no debate should arise, it will be passed before the Montana case comes up.

Should there be manifested a desire to discuss it, however, the bill will go over until after the Montana case is settled.

The next bill in the order of business is the McKinley administrative customs bill; but as the appropriatiens committee will have the district, army and pension bills ready for the consideration of the senate during the week, it is scarcely probable that the customs bill will receive much, if any, attention.

In addition to the appropriation bill, the senate will be asked by Mr. Hale to take up and dispose of the bill proposing a special enumeration and certification of Chinese residence by the census officials.

by the census officials.

Saturday will be devoted to disposing of bills on the calendar to which no objection is made.

IN THE HOUSE.

The death of Mr. Randall will, it is presumed, operate to postpone further debate in the house on the bill to establish a national zoo in Washington, which was the order for tomorrow, until the next district day, when it will be the unfinished business.

The senate naval appropriation bill is the only enlivening feature in prospect for the week, otherwise the proceedings promise to be of a purely routine character.

The naval committee is making every effort to overcome the adverse action in the house in committee of the whole on the battleship clause of the appropriation bill, and hopes to reverse the decision, when the aye and no vote is taken, which may be Tuesday.

Two election cases reported by the elections committee remain to be disposed of. They are the Indiana case of Posey vs. Barrett, and the

A Drunken Man's Blood-Chilling Feats of

Agility in Newark. NEWARK, April 13 .- A scene that for nearly an hour chilled the blood of those who witflessed it was presented here to-day. One of the occupants of the tenement, 25 Belleville avenue, is George Arbuthnot, an ice man. While he was crazed with drink he went up on the roof with a two-year-old child in his

on the roof with a two-year-old child in his arms. He then began apparently to show what he dared to do. He sprang from roof to roof of adjoining houses over the narrow alleyways like a cat. His friends tried in vain to coax him down, while some of the neighbors ran for the police.

Several policemen arrived soon. At their first appearance Arbuthnot rushed to the edge of a roof, and, with a wild look, threatened to jump off. He changed his mind, however, and renewed his perilous feat of springing from roof to roof. A policeman went up to the roof, and, putting his head through the scuttle, tried to coax the man down. While he was thus engaged, two other policemen got to the roof of an adjoining house, and, stealthily approaching Arbuthnot from behind, were upon him before he was aware of their presence.

After a struggle he was overpowered. The child was taken from him uninjured, and he was conducted down to terra firma and to the police station, where he was locked up. In his flight over the roofs before the arrival of the police he tripped once and fell on a large skylight, crashing in the glass. He clasped the child safe, however, and neither was hurt.

The Town of Simsport Two Feet Under Water.

New Orleans, April 13.—The break in the Atchafalaya levee, which occurred Wednesday, two miles south of Simsport, in Point Coupes parish, is now six hundred feet wide and seven feet deep. The town of Simsport is said to be about two feet under water. Cason levee, on the west bank, about sevente miles north of Nelville, broke on Saturda night. This break is said to be 300 feet wid and ten feet deep. Advices were also received at Big Bend levee of Bayou des Glaisa, eight miles west of Simsport, badly broken.

A Strange Death.

CHATTANOGGA, Tenn, April 13.—[Special.]—
Lee Malcom, a young white man in the employ of the Chattanogga Street Railroad company, was killed last night at the corner of Market and Ninth streets, in the business part of the city. He was on the rear platform of a car arranging signal lights, and leaning forward. Turning into Ninth street on a sharp curve, the cars pass very close, and Malcom was struck on the head by the passing coach, and the blood vessels in his brain raptured. He died in five minutes. His remains will be sent to Kacxyille, his former house.

JUSTICE TO A COLORED WOMAN.

Mrs. Davis Recovers Property Deeded Her

by Her White Father.

RICHNONE, Va., April 13.—[Special.]—The supreme [court of appeals] of Virginia has rendered an opinion in a case which has in it many elements of romance. The appellant in this litigation is Alice Davis, the wife of accelered lawrence Weshired. colored lawyer of Washington city. The records in the case show that she is the natural daughter of a gentleman by the name of Strange, who during his life was a wealthy merchant of Lynchburg, in this state.

Strange was married and had a grown daughter. He died in 1889. Some time previous to that he made a deed to his natural daughter, in which he conveyed property in this state valued at about $10,000. This deed though, was never recorded. The failure to do this, it seems, was caused by the failure of Strange to name any consideration in the deed. This omission having been called to the young woman's attention, she wrote to her father and requested him to make a new deed, correcting the fatal omission, which he did.

As soon as Strange's legitimate daughter discovered this, she appealed to her father to discovered this, she appealed to her father to recall his action, representing the injustice he was doing to his family by this action. Strange visited his colored offspring and made a pathetic and powerful appeal to her to reconvey to him the property he had given her, the deed to which had already been recorded. These appeals so moved the young woman that she complied with her father's request.

A few days after this Strange died, when Mrs. Davis then instituted a suit in the circuit court of Lynchburg to recover the property she had reconveyed to him, asserting in her declaration that she had been induced to make this deed by her deep affection for her father and undue influences brought to bear upon her. The lower court decided against her, and her appeal to the state supreme court resulted in reversing the circuit court, and in favor of Strange's illegitimate daughter.

UNION, S. C., April 13.—[Special.]—The farmers' alliance of this county is still on a big boom. They have opened a large sample room on Main street, which is kept in charge of the business agent, and when the farmers want goods they give the order to the agent, who immediately orders them. Our streets, and around the depot yard, are packed all day long with wagons looded with fertilizers, groceries and other supplies ordered through the alliance. It is denied that the alliance is a political organization. It may not have been their intention for it to be a political body when it was being organized, but it seems that it is drifting in that direction at a rapid rate. It seems that they are taking great interest in politics. It is rumored that they already have a full ticket in the field. It has been remarked that "no one but an alliance man can be elected to an office in this county."

The alliance of this county is a strong body, and have some good men in its number who would make good officers. It is thought that the alliance will cause some trouble in the

A River Steamer Meets With a Fatal Mishap
—Five Persons Drowned.

East Saginaw, Mich., April 13.—The steamer Handy Boy, of the Bay line River steamers, running between Saginaw and Bay City, while bound down this afternoon, ran into the Flint and Pere Marquette railroad bridge, carrying away all the upper works. She was sixty feet west of her proper course in the channel. Carlessness on the part of those in charge is given as the cause of the accident. Captain Bolsen got ashore and escaped, although the police are searching for him George Little, engineer, and Ed Trump, the man at the wheel, are in jail. The reported drowned are: Miss May Height, aged twenty-two; Mrs. Catherine Nevins, an old lady; two ladies and one unknown man. No bodies have been recovered. A number of passengers were slightly injured. J. W. Thompson was badly hurt and taken to the hospital. It is estimated that thirty people were on the boat at the time of the accident, all swept into the river. The number lost, therefore, reported at this hour is merely conjectured.

mitted an Assault Upon a Lady Who Has Grand-children—He is Now Oglethorpe in a Bad Condition.

The Athens Banner says that authentic in formation has reached that city from Elber ton, confirmatory of the horribie stories in circulation about Hon. P. W. Davis. It is said that he confessed his assault upon a highly respected lady, with grandchildren.

It is thought that he must have been drinking at the time, for no sane man would have been guilty of such a horrible act. Mr. Davis married one of the brightest and most popu-lar ladies of Elberton, belonging to a leading

It is said that ever since his election to the legislature he has been drinking very hard, and several months ago his wife left him and returned to her father. Since then this brilliant young man has completely thrown him-self away. He had a few friends, however, who stuck to him and they still contend that Phil will be able to clear himself.

The whipping that he received was a fearful one. Mr. Harper attacked him near the court house, and Davis was lashed across the public square and back again. He asked some one to help him, but while a number of persons were on the streets and witnessed the cha not one raised a hand or voice. At last Davis fell, and Mr. Harper wore the whip out on his body up to the handle. At this time Sheriff Alexander came along, and induced him to desist. Mr. Davis then got up and walked off, when the citizens meeting was called. . It was attended by the best people of the place, who have all affixed their signatures to a paper asking him to resign his seat in the legislature and quit the county instanter.

When the attempted assault was first made known there was a strong movement in favor of lynching Davis, but Mr. Harper insisted on taking the matter in his own hands. It was reported that Phil Davis intended to return to Elberton yesterday, in which event, it is said, his life will certainly be in peril. But he will not be able to do so. The wounded man is now in Oglethorpe county with a relative, and is said to be in a critical condition.

In the great contest of 1876 no man can tell what might have happened but for his strong hand and clear head. I shall feel his death a personal loss. Not the least of Mr. Randall's qualities were his sterling integrity and rugged honesty.

there was sincere mourning over his death.

Dr. Robert W. Mallan, of this city, who has been Randall's physician since the beginning of his illness, was interviewed tonight by a reporter of the Philadelphia Press. The doctor spoke feelingly of his relations with the deceased statesman and said he believed Mr. Randall had known since last fall that his case was hopeless. The patient never said so directly, but the doctor gathered as much from remarks occasionally dropped. He was never told, said the doctor, that he was suffering from cancer.

"When I made an examination of Mr. Randall two years ago, I discovered that cancer had made such terrible inroads upon his system, that it was merely a question of time when he would die. I consulted a number of Mr. Randall's closest friends, and asked them whether I should tell him how serious his case was. They advised against this, knowing as they did that he was not a man who could stand such news. If he was informed that his illness was sure death, said they, it would break his spirit, and he would give right up. He was a man of wonderful tenacity. He wanted to live. When about a year and a half ago the story was published that he was dying from cancer, Mr. Randall criticised the article, and pooh-poohed the idea that there was any danger of his death.

Policeman R. L. Massey, who was so seriously shot, died today at 12:35 o'clock.

It was thought up to 10 this morning that Massey was better, but not so. Soon after 11 the change came, and he began to die. The wounded policeman remained conscious up to the time of his death, and talked freely with those about him, directing what turn his affairs should take. He leaves a wife and several small children.

ANOTHER DEATH MAY RESULT.

Marshal Houston is suffering terribly from his wounds. He has high fever and it is feared that the result in his case will be worse than was anticipated. It may be that Baldwin will have two lives to answer for, if he lives to do so. Tonight his condition is quite serious. He has high fever and is suffering intensely. It is feared that the wounded femoral artery may break at any time. That would mean death.

HE FEELS REMORSE.

HE FEELS REMORSE. Besides physical pain Baldwin is suffering much mental remorse. He says that he had rather have sent the ball into his own brain than to have done what he did. Dr. M.-A. Baldwin, of Cuthbert, father of the prisoner. Baldwin, of Cuthbert, father of the prisoner, arrived today at noon. After calling on his son at the jail, he visited Marshal Houston and policeman Massey, and did all that he could to relieve their sufferings. He was with Massey when he died. Dr. Baldwin says that he supposes his son was in the wrong, as he has a very fiery temper. Young Baldwin is the favorite in his family, and he has now triends have and elsewhere who has many friends here and elsewhere, who feel deeply for him. He took the news of Massey's death very much to heart. Judge William D. Kiddoo accompanied Dr. Baldwin to Brunswick. Judge Kiddoo is a noted lawyer, and in conjunction with local attor neys, who will be retained tomorrow, wil make a strong fight for Baldwin. Insanity it is thought, will be the plea of the defense Massey will be buried tomorrow.

TIDWELL'S MADSTONE.

THE HISTORY OF A PECULIAR POSSESSION.

From Curing Bee Stings and Snake Bites It The Story of Its First Use.

FAIRBURN, Ga., April 13 .- [Special.]-There s very little truth in the special which ap-eared in The Constitution of April 7. In the first place, the madstone is not in possion of Dr. Tidwell, and has not been for s eral months. The facts are these: The mad-stone is in possession of Mr. S. S. Patton, a farmer, who lives about two miles from this Milton Talley, the negro mentioned, did come to Fairburn and went out to Mr. Patton's to have the madstone applied. When he arrived there the "Famous Fairburn madstone" was adhering to a mad dog bite, on the leg of Mr. A. C. Eubanks, of At-lanta, Ga., and who works at the East Tenessee shops. Mr. Patton talked to Milton and examined the bite and asked him why the ore was so large. Milton said the had cut a piece of the flesh out. Mr. Patton then remarked to Eubanks that he would try the madstone on Milton and see if he was nad dog bit. He took the stone and applied it to Milton's bite, the madstone adhered immediately and it remained on him some time and Mr. Patton took it off and told the negro as soon as Eubanks was through with it he would apply it to him, provided he paid the usual charge. The negro said he never had the money, but would return home and get the white folks, with whom he was living, to furnish the money and return and have it applied, whereupon he left and has not been seen since. Mr. Eubanks remained several days, and as soon as the madstone rewhen it was taken from him it was applied to a mad dog bite on the person of Mr. H. D. White, of Atlanta, Ga., and it remained on him for several days, until the poison was all drawn out, and he returned ho when the stone was found.

This madstone was found in the maw of a deer by Mr. James Hunt, the father of Mrs. Patton. The deer was a very old one, and a buck, and they are not to be found in any othe kinds of deer or anywhere else. Mr. Hunt earned this from the Creek and Cherokee I

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Concerning the Tolleson Case. EDITORS CONSTITUTION: The article in the Sunday's CONSTITUTION, April 13, headed "the Tolleson Case," does not do justice to the case, and especially not to Mr. Redwine. It styles Redwine's part in the matter, "another hide out." There was no proof of any hide out by Redwine. No one swore any such thing. Redwine dealed it emphatically under oath, so did Tolleson, and R. J. Jordan, sworn, did not know of any. The charge that Redwine has is his possession assets of the Tolleson bank seems to have been based be utterly unfounded.

Then as to the usury matter. Usury was not involved in the case, which Redwine was called to answer to. He was not called on to answer any charge of usury, and when counsel for complainants proposed to question Tolleson as to the rate of interest Redwine had charged, counsel for Redwine objected because the question of usury was not involved, and the court sustained the objection and refused to allow the evidence. Tolleson did not refuse to answer the question about interest, but did say he would like to be excused from answering, but the court did not excuse Tolleson from answering the question because of Tolleson's request, but, as before stated, because the question of usury was not in issue. answer to. He was not called on to answer any issue.

After stating that the court granted Tolleson protection from answering as to the interest question, your paper says: "Here the case fell through, as this question was of vital importance to the petitioner." The writer of that article misunderstood the case. There was no question of usury in the case, and the case fell through because the evidence showed it was unfounded and not sustained by any evidence.

THE BEGGAR

A beggar died last night; his soul Went up to God and, said: "I come uncalled; forgive it Lord; I died from want of bread."

Then answered him the Lord in heaven;
"Son, how can this thing be?
Are not my saints on earth! and they Had surely succored thee."

"Thy saints, O Lord," the beggar said,
"Live holy lives of prayer;
How shall they know of such as we?
We perish unaware. "They strive to save our wicked souls, And fit them for the sky; Meanwhile, not having bread to eat (Forgive) our bodies die."

Then the Lord God spake out of heave In wrath and angry pain:
"O men, for whom my Son hath died, My Son hath lived in vain."

CHARLOTTE CORDAY.

THE HEROINE WHO SLEW MARAPIN

Striking Picture of Charlotte in Pri Her Deed and Her Last Hours,

After the heroes of art, of war, of diplomacy, room for the heorines!

The Journal's great and varied gallery of celebrities would be incomplete without a portrait here and there of one of those heroic women whose prompt and vigorous action at critical moments has changed the current of of natural history.

Room, therefore, for the gracious and charming figure of Charlotte Corday, the French maiden who, in the gloomy days of 1793 in Paris, went to the guillotine because she had assassinated Marat.

"I killed one man to save a hundred thou and; a villain to save innocents; a savage wild beast to give repose to my country." That was Charlotte Corday's only apology for her strange, wild deed, and because it was so clear that she had sacrificed her own life in the hope of checking the terror and restoring peace, the world has agreed to call her a hero mission.

"She is of stately Norman figure; in her twenty-fifth year; of beautiful still countenance: her name is Charlotte Corday.

"Apparently she went to Paris on some errand. 'She was a republican before the revolution and never wanted energy.' A completeness, a decision, is in this fair female figure; by energy she means the spirit that will prompt one to sacrifice himself for his country.'

is country."
"We see Charlotte on Tuesday, July 9, "We see Charlotte on Tuesday, July 9, seated in the Caen diligence, with a place for Paris. None take farewell of her, wishes her good journey; her father will find a line left, signifying that she has gone to England; that he must pardon her and forget her.

"On Thursday, not long before noon, we are at the Bridge of Neuilly; here is Paris with its thousand black domes, the goal and purpose of the journey.

of the journey.

"About 8 on the Saturday morning she purchased a large sheath-knife at the Palais Royal; then, straightway in the Place des Victoires, takes a hackney coach; to the Rue de l'Ecole de Medicine, 44. It is the residence of the Citoyan Murat! The Citoyen Murat is ill and cannot be seen, which seems to disappoint her much. Her business is with Marat, then? Hapless, beautiful Charlotte! Hapless, squalid Marat!

Marat!
"Charlotte, returning to ber inn, dispatche a short note to Marat, signifying that she is from Caen, the seat of rebellion; that she de sires earnestly to see him, and will 'put it his power to do France a great service.'

"No answer. Charlotte writes another note, still more pressing; sets out with it by coach about seven in the evening herself. Tired-day laborers have again finished their work; it e Paris is circling and simmering, manifold according to its vague wants; this one fair figure has decision in it; drives straight toward a purpose. SHE KILLS MARAT.

"It is a yellow July evening, we say the 13th of the month, eve if the Bastile day, when M. Marat sits, about 7:30 of the clock, when M. Marat sits, about 7:30 of the clock, stewing in slipper bath; sore afflicted; excessively sick and worn, poor man; with precisely eleven pence half-penny of ready money, in paper; with strong, three-footed stool for writing on the while, and a squalid—washerwoman, one may call her.

"Hark! a rap again! A musical woman's vosce refusing to be rejected. It is the citoyenne who would do France a great service. Marat cries, 'Admit her!' Charlotte Corday is admitted.

"Citovan Marat Lam from Caen, the seat dmitted.

'Citoyen Marat, I am from Caen, the seat of rebellion, and wish to speak with you.' 'Be seated, my child. Now, what are the traitors doing at Caen?' Charlotte names some deputies. 'Their heads shall fall within a fortnight,' croaks the eager People's Friend, clutching his tablets to write. 'Barbaroux, Petion,' writes he with bare, shrunk arm, turning aside in the bath. 'Petion and Douvet

"The chere amie and neighbors of the house flying at her, she overturns some movables, intrenches herself till the gendarmes arrive, intrenches herself till the gendarmes arrive, then quietly surrenders, goes quietly to the Abbaye Prison, she alone quiet; all Paris sounding in wonder, in rage or in admiration.

THE TRIAL.

"On Wednesday morning the thronged Palais de Justice and Revolutionary Tribunal can see her face, beautiful and calm; she dates it 'Fourth day of the Reparation of Peace.' A strange murmer ran through the hall at sight of her, you could not say of what character. Tivoille has his indictments and character. Tivoille has his indictments and tape papers; the cutler of the Palais Royal will testify that he sold her the sheathknife.

"All these details are needless," interrupted Charlotte. "It is I that killed Marat."

"By whose instigation?"

"By whose insignation?
"By no ones."
"What tempted you, then?"
"His crimes.'"
And then she utters the passionate declaration that she killed one man to save 100,000.
Let Carlyle recite the final chapter of her

THE EXECUTION.

"On the same evening, therefore, about 7:30 o'clock, from the gate of the Conciergerie to a city all on tiptoe, the fatal cart issues. Seated on it a fair young creature, sheeted in her red smock of murderess, so beautiful, serene; 'so full of life—journeying toward death—alone amid the world. Many take off their hats, saluting reverently; for what heart but must be touched. Others growl and how! Adam Lux, of Mentz, declares that she is greater than Brutus; that it were beautiful to die with her. " " The head of this young man seems turned. At the beautiful to die with her. * * The head of this young man seems turned. At the Place de la Revolution the countenance of Charlotte wears the same still smile. The executioners proceed to bind her feet; she resists, thinking it meant an insult; on a word of explanation she submits with cheerful applicy.

of explanation she submits with cheerin apology.

"As the last act, all being now ready, they take the neckerchief from her neck; a blush of maidenly shame overspreads that fair face and neck; the cheeks were still tinged with it when the executoner lifted the severed head to show it to the people. 'It is true,' says Forster, 'that he struck the cheek insultingly, for I saw it with my eyes; the police imprisoned him for it.'"

BISMARCK.

His Capability of Mastering His Appetites and Passions.

His Capability of Mastering His Appetites and Passions.

Bismarck's resignation has called up a host of reminiscences of the stalwart old chancellor, says the Brooklyn Eagle. A good share of them refer to his enormous capacity for eating, drinking and smoking, but the narrators of the anecdotes have omitted to note the fact that Bismarck, while a master of deplomacy and a man who held all of his associates, from the emperor down, with a rigid hand, should be credited with another achievement. He has shown his ability to master himself and all of his appetites and passions absolutely. For sixty-five years he ate, smoked and drank more in all probability than any other single man in the world. Six quarts of Rhine wine in the course of an afternoon when European complications were exciting left the chancellor with quite a sturdy thirst when dinner time arrived. Yet, on the prescription of his doctor and in order to reduce his weight—he had grown dangerously stout—he deliberately shut off on all liquids, cassed eating regetables, and kept himself on a diet that would have tried the temper, pluck, and will of the most enthusiastic of amateur athletes until he had reduced his bulk nearly seventy pounds. It is related that in a similar way he censed smoking at an hour's notice, so as to make an accurate test of the effect that smoking had upon his nerves. One of his physicians told him that a tremulousness of the hand, of which he complained was the result of his inordinate use of tobacco. He thereupon broke off a life-long habit with as much case as though his love for smoking was a mere caprice. At the end of six months he found that his hand still shook. Then he took up smoking again and has kept at it ever since.

CREMATED HIS SISTER.

How an American Abroad Saved $360 by Outwitting the Undertakers. From the Washington Post.

Mr. James T. Dubois, who was for several years consul at Aix-la-Chappelles, gave some interesting reminiscences of his stay abroad to the members of the Thirty-three Limited Club at the Riggs house last night. Mr. Dubois, who is amost entertaining talker, told many stories of his experience which are worthy of relation to a larger audience than the member of the club who were his delighted auditors last night. One of his incidents may be briefly

One day he was approached in his office by a man who carried a small box under his arm.

"I want an invoice to New York for this box," said the man.

A blank form was produced and Consul Dubois asked a few questions. One of them related to the age of the contents of the box.

"Twenty-six years old," said the man.

"What is their nature?"

"My sister," was the reply.

"What is their nature?"

"My sister," was the reply.
Then he told his story. His sister had died a few days before, and when he went to have the remains shipped to New York he found that it would cost $250 to embalm and inclose them in casket, and $150 more to ship them across the ocean. As he did not want to pay $400 he had gone to a crematory, had the remains incinerated for $25, and proposed to ship them for $15, saving $360 by the operation.

After this explanation he was given the in-voice, paid the usual fee, and departed with the little square box containing his sister's ashes under his arm.

But this was not the sequal to the affair.

But this was not the sequal to the all ar. The box was imported into this country free of duty. When this fact became known, in connection with the way the undertakers had been outwitted, a formal protest was sent to the Treasury Department by some undertakers abroad against the importation of human ashes free of duty on the ground that Americans dying abroad would be cremated and sent home thus dearning emplainers, manners, manner e, thus depriving embalmers, manu facturers of coffins, and others interested in caring for the dead of a source of revenue fron their legitimate business. This appeal was never acted upon.

But He Killed the Grizzly.

rom the New York Sun. "Did I ever see a grizzly?" repeated the man in the bearskin overcoat. "Well, I should remark Yes, sir, and killed one, too. What do you think of those for claws?" of those for claws?"

And he pulled out and passed around for inspection several claws which gave one the shivers with their length and sharpness.

"I had a saw mill out in Nevada," continued the man after the claws had been gathered in, "and one day when I was all alone a thumping big grizzly came down out of a gulca and entered the mill, and drove me out. He didn't seem very ferocious, but as soon as he had chased me out he began rolling and playing in a pile of sawdust. His antics were laughable and it was plain that he was almost tickled to death. He stayed around for an hour or two and then walked off. Next day, at about the same hour, he came again, and again he played in the sawdust, like a pup rolling in the grass." "But why dfdn't you shoot him?" asked one of the group.

"Because my man had gone off to get my Winchester repaired, and I had only my revolver. You might as well shoot at him with a popgun. I determined to do for him, however, and on the morning of the third day I planted twenty pounds of powder in the center of the sawdust pile and laid a train around behind the mill. At noon I shut down and watched for old Ephraim, and at 2 o'clock he hove in sight. He came right along as if he had the best right in the world to be there, and, without looking around for me, he made for the sawdust and began to enjoy himself hade for the sawdist and began to enjoy missin. I let go for him with the train and took to my heels. There was a flash, and a crash, and a smash, and I looked back to find everything gone and the heavens showering down the blood and hair of the grizzly. I had blown him up, but the mill went, too."

ut where was the sawdust?"

"And it aidn't occur to you that in blowing up "Also blow up the mill? No, it did not. It was "Also blow up the mill? No, it did not. It was an error of judgment on my part, and that accounts for my being dead broke at present and under the necessity of traveling second class. Gentlemen, be warned by my sad fate. If you want to blow up a bear lead him off to some desolate spot, where no harm can come of it, and five pounds of powder will hoist him as high as ten."

A young teacher in an intermediate school, the rovidence Journal says, wished to communicate Providence Journal says, wished to communicate with a teacher at one of the grammar schools about a mile away the other day. For this purpose she chose one of her bright scholars and despatched him with a note directed to the young lady. When the messenger arrived at his destination the teacher chanced to be illustrating some lesson to her pupils at the blackboard. She therefore sent word to the boy to take a chair. When at leisure she summoned the boy, who was supposed to be seated in the corridor. but he had disappeared. The young lady was nonplused, but the mystery was solved when, some time later, the boy returned, bearing with him the chair which had been given him to sit the he had seconted the invitation, the takes some time later, the boy returned, bearing with him the chair which had been given him to sit upon. He had accepted the invitation "to take a chair," and had carted it upon his shoulders back to the school he came from. The teacher, after she had recovered from the shock of seeing him drag the strange chair up to her and deposit it by her side with a conscious air of duty well performed, had sent him back with it. He was pretty well tired out when he returned, and his only explanation was a sob, and "you told me to take it."

POLITICS OF A WEEK.

THE CANDIDATES GATHER IN BLAIRSVILLE.

Judge Brown Will Be in the Field-The Legislative Race Cases in Court.

BLAIRSVILLE, Ga., April 13 .- [Special.]-Union has been on the qui vive this week. The regular term of the superior court and the fact that it was thought the trial of Frank Swaine for the murder of Rev. John H. Lance would take place brought out the entire popu-

JUDGE BROWN WILL BE IN THE FIRLD.

Judge James R. Brown, while not formally in the field for congress from this district, addressed a large and enthusiastic and lessed as large as large and large and lessed as large as large and lessed as large as large a dressed a large and enthusiastic audience in the courthouse Wednesday. He delivered one of his strong and characteristic speeches, and should be conclude to enter the race in Union he will find a strong following.

Hon. Carter Tate was here shaking hands with the boys, and while he made no address, he nevertheless got in some good work, and his following in this county is strong, and the one who gets the delegation will find in him a foeman worthy of his steel.

THE LEGISLATIVE RACE. The legislative race is in a chaotic state. This is Union's time for senator, and either McG. Caldwell, W. E. Candler or A. J. Ledford will wear the senatorial toga.

Mr. Caldwell formerly represented the district, and is a strong man; as to Candler, everybody knows "Buck," and a more efficient man than he would be hard to find. Mr. Ledford is a young man of sterling worth, the head of the alliance and a good all-round man. The senate would be honored by his presence.

The house is scarcely spoken of yet, but the possibilities are that Hon. T. J. Burt may enter the field, and should he do so, he will likely pull through, as he has never been beaten before our people.

CASES IN COURT. The court adjourned Wednesday evening to meet again third Monday in May, when the trial of Frank Swain and Newt Swain, Jr., for the murder of John H. Lance will take place. The evidence being entirely circumstantial, and some of the witnesses not being present, the lateness of the day in the week made an adjournment necessary as the trials could not be ncluded before the judge had to be elsewhere to hold court.

Public opinion is very high against the accused; the prevailing opinion is they are guilty, and it will be very hard for them to pull through, as the circumstances are very strong against them. Rev. Mr. Lance was a leading local Bantist divine, on his way to one of his appointments, when murdered and thrown into a creek, where he was discovered a few hours later. The people became aroused as never before, and in a short while Frank Swaine was arrested for the crime, and has been in jail ever since. Newt Swaine, Jr., his brother, was indicted along with him, and was arrested Tuesday night and is also in jail to await trial as above.

Northen is a decided favorite for governor. His Briength over the state, as shown by The Constitution, compared with the other gentlemen whose names have been mentioned in that connection, has added greatly to his strength here.

It is generally conceded that Carter Tate is the man to measure arms with Parson Pickett.

Judge Brown can bring to bear the powers that have controlled Georgia politics for many years, and in that way may be able to pull through, but the disposition on the part of the people to give the old politicians a rest, and the young to nominate and elect one of their number, clearly Indicate that should he come into the race the old ninth will witness a scramble for the nomination.

AN OLD MALE ACADEMY, The People Interested in Its Re-organization. Washington, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]—The people here are discussing a thorough reorganization of their male academy. The school is one of the oldest in the state, the trustees holding office and owning the school property under an act of the legislature dated 1783. Its reconstruction has been delayed through a division of sentiment in regard to public schools. The town contains more black than white voters, and it is apprehended that public schools would dear appeal and the public schools would be appealed to the public school would be appealed to t than white voters, and it is apprehended that proble schools would draw more negroes in from the country, which is very undesirable. This has thus far prevented Wasnington from having a public school system, and may do so again. But it is believed that this is one of the best situations for a male school of high character in Georgia. The fine free library would be a great advantage. It is so near the male academy that it could not be much more convenient if in the same house, and it contains a very fine collection of books and charts for reference.

The Mink Run Down. VILLA RICA, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]—
For several weeks Mrs. N. A. Windsor has been missing her chickens. They would go and she could not learn where or when until today she caught up with the thief. An old mink had taken lodging under a hay barn and raised a family of four little minks. All hands got after them. Nat Windsor with an old confederate arms cam. Bab Orneshy with an erate army gum, Bob Ornesby with an-one, Mrs. Windsor with a pitch-fork, the cook with the battling stick, the little boys and girls with sticks and clubs. After chasing old mammy mink one-half mile to the creek, Nat succeeded in bringing her down with his musket. They then returned and pulled down the barn and killed the young minks.

Protracted Meeting at Guyton.

Protracted Meeting at Guyton.

GUYTON, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]—The protracted services at the Methodist church have been in progress all the week. The attendance has been good, considering the daily demands made upon the members and the public with their daily duties. The pastor, Rev. J. E. Wray, is being assisted by Rev. T. T. Christian, the presiding elder of the Savannah district; Rev. J. E. Griner, of the Springtield circuit; Rov. J. C. Griner, of the Eden circuit, and Rev. Mr. Morgan, formerly of the North Georgia conference, but now located at Guyton on account of ill health.

Forest Fires in Effingham.

GUYTON, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]—The very dry seasons in this section have again started the forest fires. On Friday a very destructive fire broke out near Three-and-a-half, Central railroad, and swept over the county adjacent, to the Central railroad for several miles. Much timber and fencing were destroyed.

It was finally stopped on the plantation of B. J. Cubbedge, a prominent Central railroad official. These fires occur so often that it is thought that they are started by designing persons, and people are now discussing plans to put a check on the indiscriminate system of burning off the forest. Some think it should be made a criminal offense to set fire to the woods in the absence of proper restrictions.

MARSHALLVILLE'S ENTERPRISE. The Center of the Great Fruit Region of

MARSHALLVILLE, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]

The Marshallville Manufacturing and Improvement company has just been organized.

Maximum capital one bundend themsand dolong Maximum capital, one hundred thousand dol-lars; ten per cent of which has been paid in as the law requires, and an organization perfected, with the following board of directors: W. H. Felton, J. W. Frederick, L. O. Niles, J. H. Pharr, B. T. Moore, I. F. Murph and Felder Frederick. They already have in view the building of a ten thousand dollar hotel.

MANUFACTORIES TO BE ENCOURAGED. The chief object of the improvement comsmall industries, or even large manufactories, by donating lots, or taking stocks, or both, in such industries as promise well. CANNING FACTORY WANTED.

A canning factory wanted here, and material assistance will be extended to any one who will locate one here. It is the place for it—labor is cheap, primeval forest near by, and fruit and vegetables "world without end".

A small sawmill that could "put down" in various places for 200,000 feet of lumber would pay well. Lumber is in great demand.

Native hard woods are here in abundance, hickory, oak, gum, beech, ash, poplar, immense white caks, iron wood, and tupelo, the best tray-wood in the south, are all here and to be had for the asking almost.

SEVENTY-FIVE CARLOADS OF PEACHES.

SEVENTY-FIVE CARLOADS OF FEACHES.

In spite of the cold, which in various places has proven so disastrous to fruit, it is estimated Marshallville will ship seventy-five carloads of peaches, which, in view of the short crop, will probably bring $150,000.

In the neighborhood of Marshallville are planted 1,200 or 1,500 acres of peach trees, all of which will be bearing in two years.

Smoking tar and sawdust may be seen at this hour, 11p. m., like camp-fires, built that the smoke may keep away the dreaded frost from the peach.

Monteyuma to the Front.

rom the Montezuma Record. Arrangements have been perfected by which Montezuma will be making ice within seventy days. The machinery has been ordered shipped here within the next thirty days. Montezuma Investment company will proceed at once to erect a suitable building at some convenient point in which to place the machinery as early as it arrives, when ice will be manufactured at the rate of five tons or more per day. We will be pre-pared to sell ice cheaper than any ice company in eorgia. Our water is perfect and pure as th nectar of gods, and our ice will be without a waste or a blemish. The investment is a good one and will pay its stockholders handsomely. The ice company will begin with a capital stock of about ten thousand dollars, and increase same as the de-mands necessitate.

MONTEZUMA VARIETY WORKS. MONTEZUMA VARIETY WORKS.

The Butler variety works outfit, complete, has been purchased and will be controlled by a stock company of about four thousand dollars capital. A good substantial building will be constructed in which this machinery, with capacity increased, will be placed for the purpose of making ax handles, hoe helves, fruit crates, barrels and all kinds of furniture, and many and various things made of wood—from a toothpick to a cotton press. Planing and variety mills will also be attached, which will be prepared to make every conceivable thing necessary for house ornament and house building.

thing necessary for house ornament and house building.

HOLT'S DYSPEPTIC ELIXIR COMPANY.

A charter has been applied for by this medicine company, which will be granted next court, for manufacturing an already well known medicine. This enterprise, like all others, has money to back it and is bound to succeed. Dr. P. R. Holt, Messrs. J. E. DeVaughn, E. B. Lewis and Frank Holt, are the charter members. They will not be confined to one, but will make many kinds of medicines, liniments, dyes, perfumes, etc. A large 49x70 foot room is being granged for the business. THE MONTEZUMA INVESTMENT COMPANY holds a large interest in all those enterprises, except the last, and will push these and many more to completion.

cept the last, and will push these and many more to completion.

This company will be chartered at the May term of the superior court. The business now is being conducted by the board of directors, and the stock-holders are not at all uneasy about their interest. With a million of dollars and such business men as J. E. DeVaugnn, E. B. Lewis, John W. McKenzie, and eight others at its head, there is no chance to retrograde or for the business to lag, this company will build several houses for machinists and factory men, and others who wish to rent or purchase.

The stock in this company was all soon taken and some is now above par, but none on the mar and some is now above par, but none on the mar ket for sale. One dollar and fifteen cents has been offered and refused. Everybody had an op-portunity given them to take stock, and therefore this company is entirely local, and every person is its friend. It will do much to develope Montezuma and to build up Macon county. Montetezum and Macon county are identified—the interest of one is the interest of the other.

SUWANEE BUDDING OUT. Capitalists Swarming Around the Little

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga., April 13,-[Steeial.]-Suwanee, in this county, on the Air-Line road, i on a "boom." A crowd of New England capita ists have been attracted to the place and commu-nity adjacent by the mineral value of the lands near Suwanee. Messrs. Baxter, J. A. Born and H. A. Garmanry own a valuable gold mine within two miles of town and these capitalists have an option on it. In addition to this mine Colone James P. Simmons has one near by that has fo James P. Simmons has one near by that has for many years been known as the "Simmons" gold mine. Both of these are reported to be immensely rich. Still another that has not yet been worked is rich in mineral wealth and this lies near the Charthhoochee river, on a farm owned by Judge N. L. Hutchins, of this place. In fact there is a vein of gold and other valuable ores traversing that portion of the county, and it seems that these New Englanders are about to get control of the majority of the same.

Inglanders are about to get control of the majority of the same.

A MINER TALKS.

Captain Thomas, an old and long experienced miner, says the specimens from these mines are the finest he has seen in the state. On May the 5th these capitalists will arrive in Suwance in a special sleeper to remain investigating, examining and prospecting several days. They already have options upon most of the valuable property in Suwance, and through Mr. Baxter and Mr. Penty Harris, of Fort Payne, Ala., they are getting deeds to everything. Suwance owes a debt of gratitude to Mr. Harris, who is the prime mover in bringing these capitalists to Suwance. A delegation of citizens of this place will meet them at Suwance.

The Whole Family Crazy.

JEFFERSON, Ga., April 13.-[Special.]-Milledge Bennett was adjudged a lunatic a short time ago and sent to the asylum from this place, and very soon thereafter it was made public that his children had gone crazy and were a terror to the children in the neighborhood. So on yesterday Mr. Crisier, while at work on his place, was approached by one of the boys, and he ordered him away from his place, when he refused to go, and in order to arrest him he had to shoot him.

SHORT TELEGRAMS.

GRIFTIN, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]—Judge James S. Boynton is quite sick at his residence on Hill street. He had to adjourn Pike superior court Thursday in consequence of his filness.

SYLVANIA, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]—The dwelling house in which Mr. Robert Bazemore, Jr., and his family resided, about two miles below here, was burned down night before last. Mr. Bazemoro was not at home and his wife was unable to save anything from the flames. The house belonged to Mr. Cuthbert Wells, and was not insured.

THE CASTING OF LOTS.

A STATEMENT CONCERNING JOHN WESLEY REFERRED TO.

Rev. Dr. W. P. Harrison Admits that John Wesley Cast Lots, But It Was Not in the

EDITORS CONSTITUTION-In THE CONSTITU-TION of the 7th instant I find the following statement: A century ago, and later, the best and wisest

Christians, from John Wesley down, held Bishop Jenner's opinions, so far as lotteries were concerned, and patronized them openly. If Bishop Jenner's opinions are correctly stated, and I do not question that they are, I must be allowed to say that John Wesley never endorsed any views or sentiments that can be construed into similarity of meaning. Believing that you have been misled in this matter, allow me to say, in the most emphatic manner, that John Wesley never endorsed or patronized anything resembling a modern lottery. Not one fact of his life, not one line of his writings can be brought forward to sustain Bishop Jenner's views on the subject of John Wesley did believe, and for many years he openly practiced, a system of appeal to the Divine Providence by means of "the casting of lots." But this is a very different thing from the "lottery" of modern times. John Wesley's "casting of lots" had nothing whatever to do with the buying or selling of tickets, or the distribution of prizes in money, or anything that was of pecuniary value. I will explain Mr. Wesley's method of "casting a lot," and the reasons he gave for the practice. In the XVI chapter, 33d verse of the Book of Proverbs, we find these words: "The lot is cast into he lap, but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord." The belief that the higher but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord." The belief that the higher powers would answer questions of duty and expediences by means of "the lot" was general in the earliest times of pagan antiquity. Hence the "Sortes Virgili of the first centuries of Christianity, and afterwards the same uses were made of the Bible. Seeking an answer from a divine source, the inquirer took the book of Virgil's poems, or the bible, as the case might be with a heathen or a Christian, and appealing mentally to the invisible spirit, he opened the book, and the line, verse or sentence upon which the eye fell upon opening the pages was construed into an answer from the Supreme Being.

This was Mr. Wesley's practice for many years, for which he did not escape the criticism of some of his wisest and best friends. "At some rare times," he says in the eighth volume of his works, "when I have been in great distress of soul, or in utter uncertainty how to act in an important case which required a speedy determination, after using all other means that occurred, I have cast lots or opened the Bible. And by this means I have been relieved from that distress, or directed in that uncertainty." This practice, he tells us, he learned from the Moravians, and he quotes this passage from the declarations of the divines at Wirtemberg: "We have a peculiar esteem for lots, and accordingly use them, both in public and private, to decide points of importance, when the reasons brought on each side appear to be of equal weight. And we believe this to be then the only way of wholly set-side appear to be of equal weight. And we be-lieve this to be then the only way of wholly setting aside our own will, of acquitting ourselves of all blame and clearly knowing what is the

of all blame and clearly knowing what is the will of God.

This was 'the only "lottery" endorsed by John Wesley, and how far that practice differed from the lotteries of modern times the reader is prepared to judge. It is searcely necessary to say that the confusion of ideas in this case has arisen from the appropriation of a word whose scriptural use knows nothing of the disposal of money or property by a "game of chance." The appeal of pious men to the superintending providence for direction in doubtful problems of duty, and the desire to accumulate money hy a game of hazard, are accumulate money hy a game of hazard, are as far apart as the poles. W. P. Harrison. Nashville, Term., April 10, 1890.

Hypnotism.

From the Philadelphia News. The incredible assertions made concerning hypnotism, in correspondence from abroad, discount the ridiculous claims made a few months ago for Dr. Brown-Sequard's "elixir of life," and just as the elixir was proved a fraud

"hypnotic science" is likely to be.

Listen to Dr. J. M. Charcot, of Paris, in the

"I set a subbject asleep and placed him in the somnambulic state. I then say to him: 'You know A; he is a contemptible fellow and is eyer trying to injure you. He must be put out of the way. Here is a dagger. Tomorrow (or the day after or ten days hence, as the case (or the day after or ten days hence, as the case may be) you will make your way to his home; you will wait till he quits the house and will stab him without pity. He must die. You are not to remember at all that I ordered you to kill him, even if you be hypnotized again.' The subject takes the suggestion and promises to kill his enemy. At the appointed hour he will be at the place named, and will deal the blow with a steady hand. Whether arrested or not for the deed, he will find it out of his power to reveal the name of the man who gave him the dagger."

If this is not pure balderdash it reads like it. And Dr. Charcot's paper gains no additional value from the credence given it by leading medical journals in Europe, for those periodicals have been repeatedly mistaken in the past.

The fact that strong wills have power over weak ones has been known for many centuries; "hypnotism" is this—probably nothing more whatever.

Economy in Good Roads.

Economy in Good Ronds.

From the Springfield Republican.

The English horse, employed in the streets of a city or on the roads of the country, does twice as much work as the American horse similarly placed. How? Why? Is the English horse better than the American? Not at all. Is he overworked? I have seen no evidence that he is. I have seen but one lame horse in London. The simple explanation is, the English has invested in perfect and permanent roads what the American expends in perishable horses that require to be fed. We are supporting hundreds of horses to drag loads through holes that ought to be filled, over sand that should be hardened, through mud that ought not to be permitted to exist. We have the misery of bad roads, and are actually or practically called upon to pay a premium for them. It would be demonstrably cheaper to have good reads than poor ones. It is so here. A road well built is easily kept in repair. A mile of good macadamized road is pair. A mile of good macadamized road is more easily supported than a poor horse. But, after all, the broad three of English vehicles have much to do with saving the roads, while our narrow ones cut them up badly.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is on the flood tide of popularity, which position it has reached by ts own intrinsic, undoubted merit.

Art and Money.

Art and Money.

From the Mirror.

Lamentable it may be, but true it nevertheless is that The Gondoliers owes its second failure in this city largely to the fact that it has been religiously kept up to the Gilbert and Sullivan standard.

Had Mr. Carte instructed his comedians to "gag" the text liberally; had he consented to vulgarize the performance by a plentiful infusion of "localisms;" had he procured for encore purposes a fine assortiment of topical verses; had he encouraged the introduction of political allusions; had the actors been told to unbend, and throw in all the acrobatics and nonsense they could think of—it is possible that the opera would have met with a profittable degree of favor.

As it is, Mr. Carte is obliged to pocket his losses, swallow the mortification of defeat, and go home to England with his company, while the American troupes, in less fertile fields of endeavor, remain behind making momey with The Gondollers.

I don't know that this result is one that New Varkers hould feel mound near the treasure to

New England in the South. Hand to hand, shoulder to shoulder, in the most perfect union that ever reconciled two once embittered and divided sections of our common country, the people of New England are working with the people of the They have come, they are coming, to us from her far bleak hills and valleys, not as travelers of a day, impelled by curios ity; not seeking to revive the memories of our battle-fields, looking for blood-stains upon the white breasts of the daisies that cover the graves of war; but they have come forgiving and forgetful, even as we have forgiven and forgot in the new life which has dawned on us, in the new conditions which surround us, and have cast their lots with us for the upbuilding of the south, whose wealth has wooed them, whose unlimited resources give such rare promise of rich rewards. And while a few of their brethren, who have only seen the south as the old south of the war, pictured with prejudice in the columns of a partisan press, remain at home and preach dull sectional sermons to us, these, wiser in their day and generation with coats off and sleeves rolled up, are toiling side by side with southern men in prosperous southern cities.

New England City Record." It is not a great newspaper, such as the journals pub-lished in the old New England, but it does not come from that part of the country, it is nearer home than that. In the valleys of Dade county, Georgia, as if "by a stroke of the enchanter's wand," a new city of the north has risen, and at its christening, in southern dew and sunlight, this name was given it by the men who made it. It is a model New England City, where northern brains and capital abound, where northern men have found a home and northern energy and enterprise are doing wonders; they are tearing down the rocks and turning the sod of the fertile valleys; they are delving in the mines, and bringing the golden secrets of their depths to light; they are building up and brightening the whole country; and the whir of their factories, the roar of their furnaces, the shrill sound of their steam whistles will yet be heard in the cities of the far north and bring still greater colonies to the

A paper lies on our exchange table, "The

A New England city in the south! And still there are people who think the war is going on; who think that every mighty blast which rends a rock and lays bare its silver veins is ominous with wrath, and but the roar of cannon trained upon them! who spend their lives in theorizing over so-called southern problems, while their brethren are growing up and getting rich with the new south, where they find no problems at all.

The good that this yankee city in the north Georgia hills will do for the souththe good the south will do for it-cannot be estimated. It is bound to be of benefit, not only to the men who control it, but to every southern man, for from its hills and valleys will go out a fraternizing influence which will bring us into closer touch and union with the old New England cities that know so little of us.

But these northern cities are blossoming everywhere in the south, and more especially in Georgia. We strike hands with northern men wherever we go; we find them by the hundreds in Tallapoosa; we find a model yankee city in Demorest; we hear the whir of their engines in the mills of Columbus: we meet them in great numbers canned in the iron fields of Georgia, laying off new towns, that seems to spring up in a night; in long excursion trains from the north, the east and west, they come to us daily, and come to stay. All over the south they are building cities of their own, mingling with us in business, so that it is hard to tell the northern from the southern man in this great union of interests. They find no race problems, no problems of any sort; they find business only, and they become busy themselves. Let them go on with the work of citybuilding in the south. There is plenty of room for them, and a right royal welcome for all! We want to make this country a new south indeed, as well as name; and we want our northern friends to help us in the work, and still by their presence and co-operation to cement the ties which bind us together as brothers all, and citizens of one common country!

A Literary Free Lance.

The first complete edition of the works of Walter Bagehot bothers the Boston critics not a little. Even in Boston it is admitted that Bage-hot was a strong and original thinker, and that his writings are classic. But his stylehow can it be forgiven? We may talk about Carlyle's long, loose, rough sentences, but Bagehot defied the commonest rules of syntax. His political, economic and literary articles are so vigo ous and suggestive that they will not be allowed to perish, but of all great writers he was certainly one of the most careless.

The literary editor of the Boston Advertiser speaks admiringingly of Bagehot, and yet handles him with gloves off. It seems that the Englishman wrote an illegible hand. He never corrected his proofs. He credited his own sayings to other men, and appropriated the sentences of other writers, and mangled his quotations. His syntax was simply impossible. In a word, he murdered

Many of our writers have a go-as-you please style, but Bagehot defied the primary amatical rules of the English languarge. He claimed to be a "business man," and what he wrote was sparkling, bright and atic, perfectly lurid as to matter, and erent as to structure—something that could not be misunderstood, and nething that could not be parsed. The strange writer admitted that he sometimes deliberately wrote bad grammar to make his meaning clearer.

Mr. Bagehot was familiar with the rules of English grammar. He could rattle off everything contained in the school grammars and works on rhetoric, but he laughed at their teachings. He paid some attention to his moods, but left his tenses to the mercy of chance, and his verbs had no certainty of agreeing with his nouns in number and person, and his personal pronouns kicked out of the traces by singular and plural rela-

The popularity of this man's writings shows that grammar is not everything. Tried by some of the severe standards of today the authors of the Elizabethan era would be under the ban, including Shakspeare himself.

Our language is as yet in its formative stage. Perhaps Bagehot was the forerun-ner of a school of writers who, taking the position that ours is a grammarless tongue, will arrange their words to suit themselves, without a thought of the perturbed ghost of Lindley Murray.

Bagehot's example possibly points the way to a literary revolution.

A Grand Career.

The name of Samuel J. Randall recall the days of Jefferson and Jackson. All his life long he was a democrat and statesman of the old school. He began life with a common school education, and at an early age started out to earn his own living. The young man's integrity, ability and strictly business methods attracted attention. His career was not meteoric. He did not leap to the top of the ladder, but went up by slow degrees. First, his neighbors sent him to the city council. Then he went to the state senate. When the war broke out he entered the union army as a private. He was only an orderly sergeant when he was sent to congress from the first Pennsylvania district.

In congress Mr. Randall did not push his way to the front. Sheer merit made him a leader. He was called upon to lead a forlorn hope—and apparently helpless minority, but his splendid abilitles made him equal to any emergency. In the speaker's chair and on the floor of the house he was always a tower of strength to his party. He would have been the democratic nominee for president in 1880, but he was devoted to Tilden, and would do nothing for himself,

From first to last, he has been a man of granite, immovable when standing for the right, incorruptible and stainless when surrounded by spoilsmen, a pillar of the republic, and a terror to its enemies,

During his thirty years' of public service many of his associates have grown rich. But Mr. Randall remained a poor man. In all things he proved himself an honest and true man. Duty was his guiding star, and, having the courage of his convictions, he did not hesitate at times to advocate methods which were unpopular with his party. Now that his career is ended his friends and opponents begin to see the statesman and the citizen as he was. Such a man needs no monument to perpetuate his name and fame. but his fellow-countrymen will build him one, and his virtues and deeds will live in the history of the land he loved so well.

Republican Conspiracies.

It was announced recently that nine thousand republicans failed to vote in the municipal elections of Ohio.

Curiously enough the organs do not make much of a fuss over the matter. They deplore it, but they bring forward no charges. They do not declare, for instance, that the democrats of Ohio have bulldozed the republicans, or kept them away from the polls by "force, fraud and intimidation,"

When nine thousand republicans remain away from the polls in Georgia or any other southern state the case is quite different. The organs have a theory that a republican negro never tires of voting, and that if he fails to cast his ballot it is because "force fraud and intimidation" intervene and do their perfect work. This is a theory calculated to make politics interesting and keep the pot a-boiling.

The Courier-Journal catching hold of this situation, shows that nearly three million votes were suppressed in republican states in 1880, the conspiracy extending all over the north. We commend these figures to the organs.

An Attack Upon Mr. Russell.

When the Hon, W. E. Russell returned to Boston from his southern trip he embraced the first opportunity to describe the situation down this way as he saw it.

Mr. Russell told his people just what other fair witnesses have told them. He said that the negroes were well treated here, and that northern men were not ostracised, and that they enjoyed freedom of speech.

These reasonable statements were con firmed in Boston, the other day, by the testimony of several reputable colored preachers and teachers who went from the south to speak in that city. They were also empha sized by the hearty indorsement of the Bos ton Globe, the most widely circulated daily in New England.

Under these circumstances it is difficult to ccount for the reckless course of Zion's Herald in making a savage attack upon Mr. Russell. With all the evidence against its side of the question, this so-called religious organ repeats the old charges of the southhaters, and stands by them. It intimates that Mr. Russell was banqueted, flattered and hoodwinked by the southerners, and that he was stuffed with falsehoods by his entertainers. It says that he did not get his ideas of the treatment of the colored people from the negroes of Atlanta, but from the whites, and that he did not ask the northers men of Atlanta for their experience in the matter of social ostracism. All this is malignant enough, but Zion's Herald goes on to say that it could point to certain northern residents of Atlanta who would testify that they were denied freedom of speech, and that when they exercised it they suffered socially, and in a business

We must deal gently with the godly apostles who mould the religious thought of their people. But a few questions are in After charging Mr. Russell with falsely representing the southern situation, will Zion's Herald say that Bishop Turner and the Rev. Mr. Dixon, the two southern negroes who recently spoke in Boston, were equally untruthful in their statements: Will it say that Editor Taylor, of the Globe lish the opinions and the names of the no ern men in Atlanta alluded to in its attack To the casual observer the Herald appears to be discrediting en masse all the with on the southern side of the question, and vouching for those whose testimony suits its It is all right. People north and south know Zion's Herald tolerably well. They know its record as a frenzied south-hater in the past, and they know what to expect from The southern people will always be will ing to stand anything from such a paper, so long as it does not take the shape of friendship. If it will never let its damning indorsement blight us, our people will be sat-

Southern Expositions.

The latest and the most promising schem for bringing the national and the industrial resources of this section to the attention of the country is a proposition to hold, in one of the great northern cities, in 1891, an exposition made up of southern exhibits,

This scheme, as we understand it, has been suggested and will be set on foot by progressive southern manufacturers. One of the projectors is quoted as saying that the people of the south propose to make a northern pilgrimage, carrying the products of the soil, mines, factories and forests to show what the south is doing.

Such an exposition, well organized so as to cover the entire industrial south in all departments, and fairly well managed, would do a great deal of good. If it is organized at all, it should be on a scale proportioned to its importance. By thus invading the north with an exhibition of its products and resources, the south would attract the attention of thousands of capitalists and investors who have neither the time nor the inclination to visit the various local exhibitions that are held annually in the south, Meanwhile, as a sort of forerunner, we desire to call attention to the Piedmont exposition, which will be held in Atlanta this fall. This will not be in the nature of an experiment. Those who have charge of it have become experts in the art of managing affairs of this kind. The last exposition, which was a tremendous success in every way, will be surpassed in every department by the one that is to be held this fall. The exhibits will cover every branch of southern industrial progress, and every product of soil, mine, factory and forest will be represented. In fine, the whole south will be on exhibition under one tent, as the phrase goes, and the show will be better worth seeing than any that has ever been held in the

The Cotton Movement.

The New York Financial Chronicle, in its weekly review of the cotton movement for the week ending Friday evening, says the total receipts have reached 23,570 bales, against 34,377 bales last week and 41,065 bales the previous week, making the total receipts since the 1st of September, 1889, 5,632,608 bales, against 5,313,744 bales for the same period of 1888-9, showing an increase of 318,864 bales.

The exports for the week reach a total of 49,490 bales, of which 27,091 were to Great Britain, 1,410 to France and 20,989 to the rest of the continent. The total sales for forward delivery are 192,200 bales. For immediate delivery the total sales foot up 1,869 bales, including 289 for export and 1,580 for consumption.

The imports into continental ports have been 73,000 bales. There is an increase in the cotton in sight of 270,932 bales, as compared with the same date of 1889, an increase of 75,442 bales, as compared with the corresponding date of 1888, and an increase of 39,272 bales, as compared with 1887.

The old interior stocks have decreased during the week 19,253 bales, and are 25,571 bales less than at the same period last year. The receipts at the same towns have been 3,449 bales less than the same week last year, and since September 1 the receipts at all the towns are 30,716 bales more than for the same time in 1888-89.

The total receipts from the plantations since September 1, 1889, are 5,719,169 bales; in 1888-89 they were 5,417,148 bales; and in 1887-88 were 5,374,039 bales. Although the receipts at the outports for the past week were 23.570 bales, the actual movement from plantations was only 3,549 bales, the balance being taken from the stocks of the interior towns. Last year the receipts from the plantations for the same week were 20,969 bales, and for 1889 they were 14,733 bales.

The increase in the amount in sight a compared with last year is 289,845 bales, the excess as compared with 1887-88 is 358,380 bales, and the gain over 1886-87 reaches 750,344 bales,

The Chronicle says the speculation in cotton for future delivery at New York developed some strength during the first half of the week under review. The Liverpool market was closed, and it seemed to be anticipated that it would open after the Easter holidays at some advance over the prices of the previous week. Hence a notable absence of buyers.

On Saturday reports of bad planting weather caused a share of attention to be turned to the next crop. On Tuesday Aujust options resumed the lead in volume of transactions, and showed more strength than any other month. The advance on Tuesday was due wholly to speculative manipulation On Wednesday the Liverpool report disappointed the bulls, and prices declined slightly. The dearer spot market cased the early months to receive more attention, while the return of favorable planting weather at the south caused the next crop to be quite neg-

On Thursday a slightly firmer opening in response to a stronger Liverpool report was followed by great dullness, although the crop movement was quite small. Friday there was more activity, and this crop made small advance, the next sharing partially in the improvement. Liverpool advices stronger, the crop movement small, and the two influences brought out a demand to cover ontracts which caused the advance. The fact that April and August opt brought the same prices caused a good deal of exchanging from the spring to the sum mer months, the bulls thus practically getting their holdings carried for nothing. Cotton on the spot was marked up one-sixteenth of a cent on Tuesday, although business was almost at a standstill.

The Chronicle's telegraphic advices from quite favorable as a rule. In a large part of the cutton belt the weather has been dry, and where rain has faller the pracipitation has been light. Outside of the flooded districts preparations for the next crop are generally making good headway.

FERDINAND WARD, once a millionaire banker, but now a convict in a New York prison, had another cup of woe pressed to his lips the other day. It was hard enough for this man accustomed to luxury to be toiling among rough outlaws, but when the news came his wife was dead he broke down completely. Gladstone's Measures. MILLIGAN, Tenn., April 8.—Editors Constitu-ion: Please answer the following questions in our next issue: 1. What is the Irishland bill?

1. What is the Irish land bill?
2. The disestablishment of the Irish church?
3. The settlement of difficulties with the United States by the Geneva conference?
These are bills introduced by Gladstone some several years ago. Very respectfully,¹ READING ROOM.

1. The Irish land bill introduced in parliament by Mr. Gladstone was intended to relieve the distress in Ireland by giving the tenging a chapter to have to have the which they ants a chance to buy the land on which they lived. The plan was that the government should buy the lands from the landlords and let the annual rent of the tenants be paid to the government as an installment on the purchase. Thus, if the annual rent were four per cent on the estimated value of the present. cent on the estimated value of the property, it would take twenty-five years rent to pay for the land. The tenant was also to pay the government interest on the money advanced at the current rate of the Bank of England. By an equation of payments on the annual installments, the tenant would have twelve and a half year's interest to pay.

Its bishops sat in the house of lords, and the church in Ireland owned sixteen millions of property, though Justin McCarthy says there were then in Ireland five Roman Catholics to one Protestant. land five Roman Catholics to one Protestant and while ministers of the state church preached oftentimes to not more than a half dozen communicants, the Catholic church within a short distance would be surrounded by eager crowds of worshipers who were un-able to reach the interior. Sidney Smith (calls the Irish state church the greatest absurdity of modern times, and asserts that thrusting it upon the Irish people who were Catholics from early times has caused the loss of a million lives first and last. The most trouble arose before the tithes were abolished. Justin McCarthy says the state church was responsible for the troubles of 1798, and a great many other out-

The movement for the disestablishment of the Irish church began in March, 1868, and Gladstone took part in the debate, asserting that the time had come for disestablishment. Up to this dictum the mover of the first resolutions, John Maguire, had not intended going so far, but he withdrew his measure to make way for more radical resolutions by Mr. Gladstone. Stanley's amendment, seeking delay only, was defeated after a debate in which Mr. Gladstone spoke on the fourth night. Disraeli, then prime minister, announced that an appeal would be taken to the people, and parliament was soon dissolved.
The liberals were victorious and Gladstone was prime minister, with John Bright and the duke of Argyll in his cabinet. The bill for disestablishment was carried after a long debate, and was somewhat delayed by the house of lords; but when John Bright, in his blunt way, declared that it might be the worse for the peers if they re to make way for more radical res of lords; but when John Bright, in his blunt way, declared that it might be the worse for the peers if they obstructed the measure, the debate soon come to an end. Lord Derby, then above seventy years of age, made the significant prediction that if the Irish church were disestablished the English church would follow. These words now seem prophetic.

In a recent magazine article McCarthy said that the disestablishment of the English church was left over only because the Irish home rule question was so urgent that all

Shenandoah and other vessels in the service of the confederate government. The southern cause had some sympathy in England, and when these vessels of war were fitted out in England they were allowed to leave, says Mr. McCarthy, "with apparently the applause of three-fourths of the representative men of England." For this the United States government held England responsible, and the treaty of Washington resulted in a convention that held that a neutral nation should not allow one of two powers at war to fit out yessels in her ports and let them go against the other. This was followed by the German conference which awarded, the United States' government $16,000,000 indemnity for the damage done to the property of its citizens by the Alabama, the Figrida and the Shenandoah. This caused great dissatisfaction in England, and helped to turn the tide of popularity against Mr. Glad-Figrida and the Shenandoah. Thursday was marked with two pretty quiet home weddings, the Winship-Atkins marriage and that of Mr. Corbett and Miss Crary. Nearly everybody went to the Nine O'Clock german at the Kimball that same evening, a most enjoyabl offair. The Author's Club meeting Friday evening was thoroughly enjoyed by a rather different set of society people, whose interest grows with each meeting of this very successful club. Owing to the illness of a number of members, the North Side Euchre club deferred its usual meeting that Whoever it is who "sets the fashions," who says that this may be done with propriety, and frown on that which is oftentimes just as right and proper, who smiled with favor upon a custom and then freakishly declares it to be obsolete after the duration of a few weeks, no one has ever quite decided. A few years ago the fiat went forth that henceforth it would be bad form to display in any way one's wedding presents. And to the gifts of friends have been seen only by chance, or after a lapse of months, when the charm of novelty is no more. Against the custom, however, a vigorous protest has been made, and weddings in New York, the presents are once again displayed in a room set apart for the pur-pose. Han important feature which will commend itself to everyone is the omission of the giver's card. Thus o ne can see and admire and commit without fearing of saying the wrong thing. At a recent very handsome wedding in Atlanta, the I retty square hall on the second floor was filled with beautiful gifts, arranged in a most artistic manner, which were, of course, without cards, and every one could admire to his heart's content, revelling in choice bric-a-brac and rare

One of the daintiest and most unique wedding presents seen at a late wedding was a small white nicker tete-a-tete table, whose snowy square of drawn linen bore upon it a jingling little rhyme, outlined in silk of a delicate rose color. The pretty little tea pot rested on an alcohol lamp, a jar in pretty ware held the tea, and the exquisite little cups—just two of them—were of a roce color. The sugar bowl was of the same china as the tea jar, and suspended on one side of the table hung a little match basket. A tiny jug of alcohol with several little wicks tied with narrow ribbon were with the other appointments, of this pretty little affair, loving thought and care.

to call the Atlanta school the "beacon light of the south in physical culture," and by Dr. D.
A. Sargent, of Harvard, the new president, as well as Joy W. Sarver, of Yale, both of whom spoke particularly of the pleasure they felt at learning directly and fully of the Atlanta school. They were all such friends of Mr. Grady that it doubled their interest in the work.
At the request of the secretary, Dr. Seaver, Miss Lindley read a report of her work, Saturday morning, which was received with apurday morning, which was received with ap-plause which would have made Atlanta ladies proud; and Dr. Hartwell, of the Johns Hopkins, Dr. Gulick, of the School of Christian workers, and many others were very complimentary and enthusiastic in their congratulations. A Large Crown of Citizens Together With the Local Military Meets the Boys at the Depot—An Enjoyable Trip.

The Gate City Guard returned from Jacksonville yesterday morning on the eleven o'clock Central train.

Saturday the company spent in St. Augus-tine, which prevented it from reaching home with the Rifles.

At the train the Guard was met by the Atlanta Zouaves, in full dress uniform and headed by the Zouave band. A detachment of the Guard, composed of members who remained at home, and who reached Atlanta in advance of their company, also marched to the depot with the Zouaves to welcome, the re-

The Zouaves and Guard squad were drawn up in line along Wall street, opposite the depot entrance, when the Central train, bearing the Guard and their friends pulled in.

Captain Sneed marched his men to the right of the line, the band and reception detachments then forming fours on passing in front of them and heading the procession toward the armory of the Guard.

Besides the military there was quite a crowd of citizens at the carshed to greet the return-

A number of members of the Atlanta Rifles in citizens clothes were there, and as a com-pliment to the Guard, formed in the line, and under command of Lieutenant Spencer, marched in the procession to the armory, each Rifle carrying a cane in lieu of muskets

This courtesy on the part of the Rifles was highly appreciated by the Guards and their

The Guards looked pretty well worn out after their long trip, but were anything but downcast in spirits. They are perfectly satisfied with the result of the drill, but to a man they all unite in saying that the Rifles did not get a fair deal.

That the Rifles swept the field, and were beyond all doubt entitled to first place, is the universal verdict of the Guards.

As for themselves, the Guards say they had a royal time-which was not altogether fruitless, either, as they brought first money in the squad drill and third money in the inter-state contest. Together they make a snug sum.

The boys met many old friends in Jackson ville, who were pleased to renew their acquaintance of a year ago, and all in all they were treated with every courtesy and hospitality. Several exhibition drills were put up by the company. After the first one of these, which was magnificent itself, the Guards were freely taken as winners against the field.

Nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the Guards' trip, except their failure to get the big money and the injustice which they think the Macon crowd was responsible for toward

MISCELLANEOUS.

Cruel Deeds Perpetrated in the West Twen-ty Years Ago.

From the Omaha Bee.

Flowtow, a Bannack outcast, who led a YOU WILL desperate band of renegade Arapahoes, was easily the worst Indian in all the mountain country in 1869. The marauders made annual trips from Wind river, in Wyoming, to White trips from Wind river, in Wyoming, to White river in Colorado, and always left a frightful trail. They murdered plundered and burned, carrying on the work of devastation with appalling thoroughness. Emboldened by the success of a series of raids, the band essayed to sack the town of Rawlins, but they were driven off and left two dead braves as bodily evidence of the marksmanship of courageous citizens who had quickly responded to the alarm.

citizens who had quickly responded to the alarm.

Flowtow and his gang had become a standing and awful menace to the settlement of central Wyoming, and it was quite generally agreed that extermination of the cruel old fox and his followers was the only recourse of the whites, whose existence was one of alarming uncertainty. The mob traveled rapidly and under cover.

A cheerful bit of barbarism little knows to the world was practiced when Flowtow and his men happened upon a flock of sheep. The tenders were shot down as they ran and the dogs knocked in the head and laid aside for a feast. Then the braves, each carrying a big knife with sharp point and keen blade. fell dogs knocked in the head and laid aside for a feast. Then the braves, each carrying a big knife with sharp point and keen blade. fell upon the trembling, bleating sheep. They would grasp an animal by one hind leg and run the knife through the member just below the joint. The other hoof would be inserted in the slit and there was the humorous paradox of a three-legged sheep with all four legs in sight. The poor brutes would die in great agony in about seventy, two hours. It was simply impossible to extricate the uncut hind leg. This ingenious cruelty was somewhat varied by cutting a hole in one ear and thursting a foreleg into it, destroying the ability to travel unless the ear tore, which happened too often to please the redskins. In half a day these Indians would destroy a band of 5,000 sheep. They considered this work a great lark.

PLOWTOW THE BANNACK FIEND.

half a day these Indians would destroy a band of 5,000 sheep. They considered this work a great lark.

This Flotow, whose name has never been interpreted, was the biggest, cheekiest, shrewdest and most repulsive looking Indian I ever set eyes upon, writes a correspondent of the Chicago Herald. He was more than six feet tall, straight, broad shouldered, thick necked and well muscled, with deep chest. In battle with Indians he was reputed the equal of five combatants. No white man ever lived who could handle him. Added to his unsurpassed strength was increditable agility and perfect knowledge of all styles of warfare. His craftiness kept his own men on their guard. They judiciously kept from the tyrant's path when he was angry. He well understood English, but would converse only in his own tongue, and never did he support any of the remarkable toggery issued his people by the government, excepting not even the blankets, for these he exacted from the Navajos. The wretch would come boldly into settlements to trade, with blood still on his hands, and was the cleverest of swappers. So soon as possible after Flowtow's descent on Rawlins a party of men sworn to kill him started on the trail of the band. They were followed by a detachment of cavalry from Fort Steele. Lieutenant Freneh, as brave a body as ever wore a uniform, assumed command of the entire party when the civilians were overtaken.

In just a week (and it was an exciting sea-

The reds were in a wild and issolated mountain rayine and had neglected to place sentries. Though surprised, the Indiaus made a gallant fight. The opposing forces numbered about the same, but the chargers had the advantage, and then they were simply determined to win. They fired by volley and received no response after the second round.

the second round.

A dozen dead and dying Indians lay within fifty yards of their camp fire and great was the delight of both citizens and soldiers to find Flowtow just recovering from the shock caused by a bullet grazing his side. In ten minutes he was all right physically, but his mental distress was deep. His chagrin threw him into silent rage. He only glared at his captors and held his tongue.

Flowtow was made a prisoner of war. He was allowed to ride his own beautiful pony and had an escort of four men.

At night, after the first day's homeward march the captive chief was given a place and a blanket beside the campfire with a guard of six citizens and an equal number of regulars. Lieutenant French made the squad quite a speech. He said that it was beneath the dignity of an American soldier to maltreat a captive foe and that abuse of Flowtow would probably result in his reduction to the ranks or complete dismissal, but to allow the prisoner to escape was an ineffaceable blot on the honor of the army, "I charge you," said the officer, "to treat the big Injun with all the consideration due to a prisoner of war, but if he makes a move shoot him down without hesitation. You may kill him, but let there be no escape."

It was pretty well understood among the

be no escape."

It was pretty well understood among the men that they were to put Flowtow out of the way before daylight.

About 11 o'clock the camp was pretty quiet. A fun loving veteran who had been with Grant in the Wilderness and who had fought Indians on the Platte, jabbed his bayonet into the fire and let it come to a white heat. Flowtow was sitting with his head between his knees and dozing. The soldier fished his bayonet out of the embers with a couple of twigs and very carefully laid it across the sleeping chief's feet. In an instant the red steele sank into the moccasined toes and Flowtow, with a Five or six shots broke the stillness, and the dead body of a red-skinned fiend fell across the camp fire. The corporal of the guard reported that the prisoner had made a wild jump as though to break for the bushes, and Lieutenant French complimented the men on their fidelity.

Flowtow's remains were placed on a horse and brought to Rawlins, where his grave is still pointed out to visitors.

WILL MEET IN BRUNSWICK NEXT WEDNESDAY.

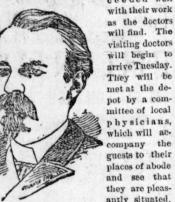

All Preparations Made on the Part of Bruns wick to Royally Treat Them-Clan Bakes, Excursions, Etc.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., April 13 .- [Special.]-Next Wednesday the Georgia Medical association will meet in annual session in Brunswick.

Over 100 doctors, from all portions of the state, will assemble here then, and it is proposed to give them such a reception as, they have never been accorded before in the history of the association.

THE ARRANGEMENTS.

For weeks past the local committees have been earnestly at work arranging the many details necessary to a proper reception of the vis-iting disciples of Æsculapius. They have succeeded well pot by a committee of local physicians. which will accompany the guests to their places of abode and see that they are pleasantly situated. Promptly at 10: 30 o'clock DR. J. S. TODD Wednesday morning the convention will be colled to order by the retiring president, Dr. J. S. Todd, of Atlanta.

THE FIRST SESSION.

This session will be devoted to an address of welcome by Mr. J. W. Bennett, of Brunswick; response by Dr. S. W. Mulligan, of Washington; the address of the president, the reports of committees, the reception of applications for membership and reports of the secretary and treasurer of the association.

Wednesday afternoon will be given up to enjoyment. For the occasion the local committee has arranged an excursion around the harbor, spiced with a clam bake and oyster roast. The members of the association and invited guests will make up the party for the excursion. The steamer Pope Catlin will take the party out, leaving her docks promptly at 2 o'clock. The programme is to make the trip around the harbor, first drawing up at ocean pier, St. Simons, where the visitors will be initiated into the mysteries of clam baking and oyster roasting. Elegant refreshment will be served aboard the boat this occasion will no doubt be a highly enjoyable one. The party will return here about 9 o'clock at night, when the physicians will entertain themselves as best they see fit.

BUSINESS RESUMED. Thursday morning at 9 o'clock the associa tion will be called to order, and after transac tion of routine business, papers will be read by Dr. S. C. Benedict, of Athens, and H. M. Chatton, of Macon. The morning's session will close after orator's address by Dr. W. F. Westmoreland, Jr., of Atlanta. In the afternoon papers will be read by Drs. K. P. Moore, on; G. H. Noble, of Atlanta, and J. M.

Hull, of Augusta, Ga. Thursday night a grand banquet will be ten-dered the association by the local committee. This banquet will be served at the Oglethorpe. The menu prepared by Manager King is an excellent one, and the feast will be one of the grandest ever spread in Georgia. During McDuffie's orchestra, as evening sisted by the Oglethorne orchestra, will furnish music. Following has been selected as "The Georgia Medical Association," "Our Invited Guests," "Georgia's Citizen Soldiers," "Brunswick's Women," "The Bench and Bar," "Georgia," "The Press," "The United States," "The Medical Profession." Distinguished speakers among the medical and ons have been invited to respond to the different toasts. So far but four of those invited have signified their intention of accepting. A BIG SCHEME.

What Does the Canal Company Intend to Do With Its Property?

MACON, Ga., April 13 .- [Special.] -- Some years also a canal company was formed in Macon and purchased about six hundred acres Macon and purchased about six hundred acres of land along the Comulgee river, between Vineville and the river. It runs from near Riverside cemetery up the Ocmulgee. It was the intention of the company to construct a canal to Macon, something like the Augusta canal, and erect factories and other industrial plants. The property also possessed many beautiful sites for residences. The canal scheme was entirely practicable and possessed many beautiful sites for residences. The canal scheme was entirely practicable and may yet materialize, though it is possible that the canal may not be huilt. Mr. J. C. McBurney, of Atlanta, is may yet materialize, though it is possible that the canal may not be built. Mr. J. C. McBurney, of Atlanta, is one of the largest stockholders in the concern. It is a singular thing that he is the only living one of the original stockholders.

and the balance of the intents are held and represented by estates.

On Friday and Saturday the owners held an represented by estates.

On Friday and Saturday the owners held an important meeting in Macon. Mr. McBurney was present. It is not known definitely what was done. It is understood, however, that they refused a large offer for the property. They have had a map made of the property. They have had a map made of the property. The land is divided off into choice serpentine walks and building sites, with here and there fountains, and rows of trees of different kinds. This would indicate that the property is to be put on the market and sold for residence lots, and a beautiful suburban home made of the entire place. The land lies beautifully. Much of it is elevated and overlooks the city beyond and the far extending country. It is conveniently situated to Macon. It is confidently expected that there is a great scheme on foot. Among the owners of the property is J. C. McBurney and the estates of William B. Johnston, Asher Ayers, S. I. Gustin, L. N. Whittle and two or three others. Developments will be twaited with interest.

Funeral of Mrs. O'Hara. Macon, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]—The neral services of Mrs. A. O'Hara, the mother Alderman Mike O'Hara, were held this ternoon, at 4 o'clock, from the Catholic nurch. There was a large attendance of the latives and many friends of the dearly bewed deceased, who was a most estimable and hristian lady. The pall-bearers were: Dr. ohn Ingalis, Hugh McKewey, Andrew Gorman, Edward Long, M. Redmond and John Winn. The death of Mrs. O'Hara is deeply mourned.

A VALUABLE PRESENT.

The Engine Men of the E. T., V. & G. Remem ber the Master Mechanie.

Macon, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]—Yesterday Messrs. E. E. Mower, T. A. Wood, R. B. Deavors and A. L. Laird, of Atlanta, engine men of the Georgia division of the East Tennessee railway, came to Macon on a pleasant mission. In the name of the engine men of the Georgia division they presented a large and magnificent alligator skin bound trunk to-Mr. C. F. Thomas, late master mechanic of the East Tennessee railway at Atlanta, but who resigned this position a short time since to accept a similar one at Macon with the Central railcad. The trunk is an elegant gift The trunk is one of the handsomest ever seen in the south. It won the blue ribbon at the Piedmont exposition.

On a portfolio in the top of the tray of the trunk was the following printed inscription in git leiters: "Presented to C. F. Thomas, M. M., by his friends, the engine men of the Georgia division East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railway, April, 1330."

He was also presented with an elegant sifk umbrella, with massive silver head. On the head was engraved an inscription similar to that on the trunk. Master Mechanic Thomas very highly appreciates the remembrance of his late associates. Recently the foremen of the different departments of the shops of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railway, at Atlanta, came to Macon and presented Mr. Thomas with a beautiful diamond pin. Mr. Thomas is a very popular man, for he has frequently been made the recipient of presents by his fellow workmen on the different roads with which he has been connected.

Macon, Ga., April 13.—[Special.]—There will be a great surprise in Macon when it is known that Wesley Travis, the colored drayman of Price & Maas was arrested last night by Officers Cherry and Long for robbery of the store of his employers, for he was considered one of the most trustworthy and valuable negroes in Macon. He has been with the firm many years. He was detected after midnight bringing boxes of tobacco, cigars, etc., out of the rear door of the store on Cherry street. It is not known how long he has been at his stealings. Travis was known as the "singing drayman," from the fact he was always singing in high tenor when driving his dray on the streets. He is now at the barracks.

DROWNED IN THE FLINT.

A Nine-Year-Old Boy Meets His Death While Playing Too Near the Water.

ALBANY, GA., April 13 .- [Special.]-This afternoon three little boys were playing on one of the three government dredging barges lying anchored on the east bank of the Flint nearly opposite the city. In attempting to enter a boat chained at the stern, one boys, Harry, the nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Farkas, lost his footing and fell into the river. The strong under-tow immediately swallowed him up, carrying him under the barge. His two little companions peered with horror stricken eyes into the murky waters be-neath, looking in vain for their little playmate, and then with crys and lamentations, spread the terrible news. Thousands gathered at the scene of the tragedy. Grappling hooks and poles were procured, and efforts made to recover the body, while the bereaved parents, pacing the banks and wringing their hands in agony of grief, watched the efforts being made. After over an hour's work the body was found directly under the barge and secured by Mr. S. F. Price.

According to mythology, the goddess of the sun, with a wisdom above that of mortals, never drove her swans through slow and stagnant waters without a bottle of S. S. S. as a preventive for malaria. In this age of enlightenment ought not we, with equal forethought make S. S. S. our daily drink when we go into malarial districts.

ATLANTA, GA., Feb'y 19th, 1890.—About two years ago a sore came in my nose. I called in a physician who could arrest it only for a few days, when it would appear again as bad as ever. Finally it became permanent, and despite the constant attention of several physicians it continued to grow worse, the discharge from the ulcer being exceedingly offensive. This was my condition when I commenced to take S. S. about a month ago; but I am now happy to say that, after taking four large bottles of this wonderful medicine, my nose is entirely well, and my general health better than it has been in ten years.

Every emigrant agent in the south knows John Beckery, "Peg Williams's negro."
He is as great a hustler in his line as Peg

But John lost his rabbit foot a few days ago. He left North Carolina in charge of a party of thirty-seven negroes, bound for Louisiana. At Vicksburg, Beckery was arrested at the instance of rival emigrant agents and put in jail. It was charged that he had used fraud in his work, representing himself as an officer of the United States, whose duty it was to move all negroes that wanted to move.

While Beckery was in jail the opposition agents took his negroes from him and reaped the profits that Beckery had counted upon as Beckery was released after being in jail one day, but his party was scattered and Othello's occupation was gone. So he came back to Atlanta and is here now waiting for "Mars Peg."

Colonel Abbott's Road.

Colonel B. F. Abbott, it will be remembered, is president of the Atlanta, Alpharetta and ne Ridge railroad.

This is the road that Captain J. M. Brosius and other Atlanta gentlemen are interested in, and is figured on as a continuation of General Fitzhugh Lee's road from Pitssburgto Lexington. That would make it part of a great trunk line from Pittsburg, Va., to Atlanta.
Colonel Abbott was in Alpharetta, Ga. prespecting, and the Free Press says of his "Last Tuesday Colonel Benjamin F. Abbott, resident of above mentioned road, and Dr. J. T. Ticherson, one of the directors, ere in Alpharetta gathering facts.

"They wished to visit the iron beds, and were carried out to Mr. Oscar Hembree's place They found many very fine specimens of ore and the visitors carried several pieces to Atand the visitors carried several pieces to Allanta with them. Dr., Titcherson, who is somewhat of a geologist, believes the beds are very extensive. He says the owners of this land should have an expert to locate the bed and then sink a shaft and examine it well.
"Colonel Abbott, what do you think about our railroad?" he was asked.
"I think the Atlanta and Blue Ridge railroad will be built. We are here today looking for inducements to bring the road. Of course the road is on paper now, but we hope to have it on the ground before a great while."
"What inducements do you find?"
"You have a very fine farming country, and the people seem to be prosperous, and this iron interest is a good inducement to a railroad and would furnish a great deal of traffic."
"What do you think of the practicability of building a road through by Alpharetta?"
"It is practicable. The country is comparatively level, and the cost of grading would be below the average."
"When will your surveying party start out?"
"They will start next week. They will reach Alpharetta in eight or ten days. It will lanta with them. Dr., Titcherson, who is begun?"

"I do not know exactly. It depends on cer-"I do not know exactly. It depends on certain arrangements. It may be begun right away, and may be some time before all the arrangements can be made. However, I feel confident the road will be built. It is the finest opening for a railroad in the south, It will not be a short narrow gauge concern. It will be a standard gauge trunk line, running from Atlanta to Pittsburg, Penn. It will be more than six hundred miles long, and will cost many million dollars. It cannot be constructed in a day."

"This road will be a short route to New York, will it not?"

"Yes, sir; it will be about one hundred miles shorter than any other route. This fact will be shorter than any other route. This fact will be one of the advantages of the road. The East Tennessee at Rome. The East Tennessee at Rome.

The Tribune says: "The report that the Rome and Decatur will be run to Kingston is denied by the East Tennessee officials who claim that the Rome and Decatur was purchased with an idea of making a short line to Birmingham. The purchase of the Rome and Decatur will give the East Tennessee people a road and right of way to Birmingham that will be only one hundged and nincty-one mles. This will be only twenty-one miles longer than the present short line to that place.

"The mortgages that are being recorded by Mr. Robert Lapsley are said to be for fifteen million dollars, and are mortgages on the Rome and Decatur, and Cincinnati, Selma and Mobile."

Abbeville and Tifton.

The Abbeville Times says: "In this issue we publish an application for a charter for another railread for our town, to be known as the Abbeville and Tifton railroad. It will pass through a section of good farming country, and as well timbered as anywhere. But little of the timber from here to Tifton has twen heaver been readered in new year year. ever been molested in any way, except a small quantity of it by the turpentine ax. It is a good section for a railroad, and we hope that the gentlemen who are at the head of the enterprise will make a success of it." Captain Hart's Road.

The Sparta Ishmaelite is talking to the point about the railroad situation so far as Sparta is concerned: "Sparta needs more direct connection with Savannah and the seaboard. This can be effected by the extension of the Union Point and White Plains railroad to Tennille by way of Sparta. This extension can be secured by the manifestation of the proper earnestness in the matter on the part of the people of Sparta. for the Abbeville and Wayeross railroad. The grading is moving on as rapidly as the force of hands will permit, hands being scarce on account of the great demand for them in this section—about five miles being ready for the ties. Seeking an Outlet to the Sea.

Seeking an Outlet to the Sea.

Birmingham, Ala., April 13.—[Special.]—
The Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroad company is after a direct road from this city to Savannah or Brunswick, Ga. They will probably buy the Macon and Birmingham railroad, now building from Macon to this city, and extend it to the sea. Chief Engineer R. H. Elliott, of the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham, has been looking over the line of the new road from Macon to this city. Last night President George H. Nettleton, of the Ransas City, met him here, and today the two officials left for Macon and Savannah. It is thought they will conclude arrangements for the purchase of the Macon and Birmingham road before they return. Some time ago the Kansas City road tried to make a traffic arrangement with the Central Georgia, but failed, and they at once began to look about for another outlet to the sea. It is considered certain that they will buy or build a line from Birmingham to some Atlantic or gulf port.

Guyron, Ga., April 13.—(Special.)—The people of Effingham county are rejoicing over the prospects of the Southbound railroad being constructed and run through the county. The people of Springfield, the county seat, are moving in the matter to secure its passage so it will take in that delightful little village, which is situated midway between Guyton and the Savannah river.

the Savannah river.

They also have high hopes that Colonel Ryan.

Machen's Middle Georgia and Atlantic will connect with the Southbound at Springfield, which was on the line as surveyed by Colonel Fry's corps of engineers.

Should the Southbound give Spring field the go by, then they will urge a junction so as to secure the Middle Georgia. Springfield is one of the old towns of Georgia, and most beautifully situated, and has always been regarded as a good health resort. It is also a place of historical prominence, and has nurtured some of the most distinguished men of this section. It was at Springfield Ward McAlister, the leader of the celebrated four hundred, first saw the light of day, and some of its inhabitants at the present time remember Ward as a bright little fellow, a good marble and knuck player, and exceled at the game of "leap frog."

ATLANTA, April 13, 1890.—Editors Constitution: Referring to an article which appeared in your wide-spread and esteemed journal of yesterday, relative to Banana Train, via Port Tamps to Chicage would say that while I take the livliest interest, as well as all the officers and agents of the East Tennesse, Virginia and Georgia system, in the rapid transit of freights, and while the unprecedented schedules referred to are not the exception but the rule, on this great system; permit me to say that the credit is due alone to the superior ability, enterprise and management of our transportation department, of which Mr. E. B. Parke is superintendent, and Mr. E. H. Barnes is superintendent of the Georgia division. That the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia system stands alone in the front rank in the unexceled movement of freight in the south, no one acquainted with the recent development of the phenomenal strides made by this great through line will pretend to deny. It is incomparable, and is attested to by Mr. Ahearn, manager of that enterprising and farseeing Central American fruit line. The ability and enterprise of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia management of putting perishable property on fast schedules and good condition into the markets of the west and northwest, is not only appreciated and recognized by that wise and sagacious gentleman, Mr. H. B. Plant, but by all classes of shippers Card From Mr. J. J. Griffin. nized by that wise and sagacious gentleman, Mr. H. B. Plant, but by all classes of shippers at home and abroad. The superb physical condition of the East Tennessee, Virgia and Georgia railway brought about by its able general ways are made the superior its able general manager has made the superior service possible. The air splitting schedules service possible. The air splitting schedules to Jesup and other junction points to principal northwestern and castern eities, our transportation department are in a position to maintain. It will be pretty rough riding for awk-ward imitators who try to follow us. Our schedules are so quick that we are actually running away from ourselves. It is the object, purpose, aim and ambition of the management purpose, aim and ambition of the management of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia to extend this magnificent service to all classes of shippers and receivers of property in this territory. The East Tennessee has been the pioneer, advecate and promoter of putting perishable property from the south to the markets of the east and northwest on fast schedules and in good condition. That this is true admits of no doubt. Our facilities for serving the public are matchless, and stand alone. I submit these few corrections in regard to the banana and vegetable movement, in order that the po-and vegetable movement, in order that the po-sition of our transportation department may be clearly set forth, and especially in view of the fact that it has always been the pride and aspiration of The Constitution to get the fruit and melons of this section to market on test especially and in prime condition. The fast schedules and in prime condition. The splendid results of the East Tennessee, Virsplendid results of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia system are due to the inspiration and leadership of the general manager, Colonel C. H. Hudson, whose great ability is well known and acknowledged throughout this country.

MacCollin Opera Company. The season at popular prices (15c, 30c and of the MacCollin Opera company will open tonight with "Falka," a charming and tuneful opera, given by the same organization during the winter, when it pleased immensely our theater-goers. Besides its beautiful music, "Falka" has a very in-teresting story, interspersed with much fun and topical songs. As for the troupe, everybody knows MacCollin and his excellent support. What they were last December they are still, and they are were last December they are still, and they are certainly worthy of the best partonage.

"Falka" is one of those sparkling works in three acts, full of delightful bellads, choruses, etc. The scene is laid on the continent, in the German empire, and the story is one of love. An old governor, the guardian of a pretty nicee and an adventuring nephew, seeks to make a match between the latter and a young woman of the nobility. While on his way to the governor's home the young man is met by brigands. Edwidge, the sister of the brigand chief, falls in love with the handsome young fellow and saves his life when it is in danger. Tancred promises to marry her in return, but escapes and is pursued. He hides in a cellar and disguises himself as a waiter at an inn. In the meantime Falka, the governor's niece, reaches the inn on an elopement tour with her lover. She is pursued by an old monk, the keeper of the convent. So as not to te discovered, Falka personates Tancred and is to be wedded to the beautiful Alexina. The truth is made known through the fact that Arthur, Falka's lover, on being sent back to the convent as the runaway girl claims to belong to the other sex. Marriage all around furnishes the clima to Life. certainly worthy of the best patronage.

A CONVICTS WEALTH.

THE STRANGE STORY TOLD YESTER DAY BY AN ATLANTA WOMAN.

She Says She is the Grand-daughter of a Con-vict Who Has Deeded Her $5,000,-000 in English Property.

J. W. Livingston.

Annie Bussey.

They are the prominent characters in a One of them is a gray haired man, a crimi-

at the mines in Dade county.

The other is an Atlanta woman—a diverced Mrs. Will McDaniel.

She says that she is a grand-daughter of the old man, and that he has deeded to her estates in England worth five million dollars.

JUST AS SHE TELLS IT.
"Last night," said Mrs. Bussey, speaking yesterday afternoon, "I received the papers from him—the deeds to the property.

"For some time past I have been trying to get him out of the penitentiary. He is nearly eighty years old now and hasn't long to live. He is my grandfather, and I am still trying to help him. Only a short while ago I addressed a letter to Governor Gordon about him, and the governor's reply was very encouraging. Dr. moreland was going to help me get up the pa-pers—or tell me how it should be done—and I am going up here now to Dr. Miller's office,' showing a card upon which some one had writ-ten for her Dr. Miller's name and address. poetry. THE CONSTITUTION has published a dozen or more pieces that he wrote. That shows he has some education.

He was at sea for a long time, too; but I don't know anything about that. "He was sent up from Muscogee county, Columbus, for burglary.

"Nobody knows much about him, but he has traveled a great deal and seen lots of the world. He tells it to everybody, though, that he is an Englishman by birth." AND THE ENGLISH FORTUNE.

"As I told you, the deeds came to me last night. They are for five million dollars' worth night. They are for five million dollars' worth of property over in England. I suppose he gives it to me because he knows he has only a short while to live, and because I have done so much for him. I don't know whether that's all the property he has or not.

"I showed the papers and the deeds to Lawyer Albert here, and he says they are very valuable. Of course I am going to have the whole thing investigated at once. I can't say much more about it now for they have advised me not to talk. I can't help believing that my grandfather has very valuable property in England, and he has said before that he intended leaving me everything, as I was the tended leaving me everything, as I was the only one who had been faithful to him."

Mr. Frank T. Ridge, well known in Atlanta. has relatives in Greenville, Miss., and from one of them received a thrilling letter yesterday. The letter tells of the Mississippi overflow.

"For the past week," says Mr. Adams, the writer, "I have been very busy helping to rescue the poor people from the flood. We are having terrible times out here with the water. The country is overflowed for miles.

"I have often seen accounts of floods, but this beats all I ever heard of. Greenville is from one to five feet deep in water except four or five blocks next to the Georgia Pacific railroad depot. The water is two feet deep around my house, only wanting ten inches of being over my floor.

"The levee gave way today one week ago, just above my house and the waters were upon us in a few hours but I was ready for the water having just finished me a boat which has done us in a few hours but I was ready for the water, having just finished me a boat which has done me good service. As soon as the levee broke I took my boat to the upper part of the tewn to help the people out of the water. When I got there I found people waist deep in the water.

"I saw mothers standing in the water holding their children above the surface crying for fear of a watery grave.

"Most of the poor people lost all they had.
"Mules, horses, cows, hogs and fowls were drowned by the thousand.

"There are thousands of people here without anything to eat, or any money to buy with. The old river men say the waters will be up for at least thirty days longer. If it does, people will starve, for some of them are about that now. I notice the Greenville papers say that the poor people are not suffering, if they think poor people can do without something to eat and not suffer. They are doing the poor a great injustice by making any such statement. People who read it will not help the poor, thinking they do not need it. The merchants will credit nobody now. I have heard farmers say they could not get anything for their hands to heat, and that they could not borrow any money on their farms while they are under water."

Mr. R. B. Swift, of Atlanta, is authority for for the statemeat.

"And it manufactures," he continued, "more than 15,000,000 pounds of tobacco a year. Just think of that—nearly 2,000 pounds for every citizen, white, black, young and old.

"It has the largest cigarette factory on earth, and the most extensive smoking tobacco business in the world.

"Last year W. Duke, Sons and company paid $629,000 for revenue stamps; $775,000 for advertising; and $380,000 for labor.

"The firm manufactured in twelve months exactly $80,000,000 cigarettes.

"Within in the past thirty days the same firm has given to Trinity college $85,000, which college, by the way, is to be removed to Durham. Mr. Jule Carr, president of the Blackwell Tobacco company, gave the site upon which Trinity college is to be built, paying $20,000 for it.

"There is today but one vacant, tonantable house in the town of Durham.

"In thift, push and business enterprise, Durham reminds one more of Atlanta than any other southern town, and everything points to a bright future for it.

I took eccasion while there to get some prices on suburban property, and was surprised to find acreage property almost as high there as it is in and around Atlanta, varying in price from $500 to $800 an acre.

"Durham is soon to have the largest cotton factory in the state.

"Durham days bosats of a fertilizer factory 50x300 feet, with additional store rooms for carrying their stock. Today the farmers tributary to Durham, rejoice in the fact, they can carry a load of tobacco to Durham, and bring back a load of guano manufactured right in their own town.

"Noticeable, in the residences now being erected are to be seen styles of architecture seldom seen in cities of less than 50,000 inhabtants, with all the modern conveniences. This town is soon to have two new railroads running into it, in addition to some four or after it now has."

L. WILSON AND KROUSE & Auctioneers.

This property lies on the dummy railroad, fronting South Boulevard; looking out upon Grant Park on the one side and the beautiful Confederate grounds upon the other. The view and surroundings are grand. The elegant Confederate Home building looms up in the east a perfect picture of beauty and elegance.

This part of the city is developing more rapidly than any part of South Atlanta. This property is covered with a magnificent growth of original shade trees. The approach through the park is always pleasant and attractive.

Atlanta is making rapid strides to soon show a population of over 100,000 people; first-class and choice lots will be more sought after each year. Then buy now; because you can fix your own price. When the Boulevard is completed to its southern terminus, the very lots we sell you now will be worth two and three times as much as you pay at this sale.

Every person that has invested in good real estate in this place since it was Marthasville has made money. If any one desires to pay all cash for his lot, we will arrange to secure for him a loan with which he can build and pay back the same in monthly installments.

A free lunch will be spread on the grounds at precisely 12 o'clock noon, immediately after which the sale will begin. Every lot will be sold on its morits. Terms—One-third cash, balance six and twelve months, with eight per cent interest. For plats apply to

aches a Practical Sermon on the Difficulties of Business Life-Some Good Ideas

Bacoklyn, April 13.—[Special.]—At the service in the Academy of Music this marning pr. Talmage, after reading appropriate pasages of scripture, gave out the hymn:

"So let our lips and lives express The holy Gospel we profess." ounced as his text Proverbs 20: 14: It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer; but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth. owing is his sermon in full;

Palaces are not such prisons as the world nes. If you think that the only time bings and queens come forth from the royal gates is in procession and gorgeously attended, you are mistaken. Incognito, by day or by night, and clothed in citizens' apparel, or the dress of a working woman they come out and see the world as it is. In no other way could King Solomon, the author of my text. have known everything that was going on. From my text I am sare he must, in disguise, some day have walked into a store of ready-made clothing, in Jerusalem, and stood near the counter and overheard a conversation between a buyer and seller. The merchant put a price on a coat, and the customer began to dicker and said:

"Absurd! that ceat is not worth what you ask Why, just look at the coarseness of the fabrie! See that spot on the collar! that it does not fit. Twenty dollars for that! Why, it isn't worth more than ten. They have a better article than that, and for cheaper price, down at Cloathem, Fitem & Brothers. Besides that, I don't want it at any price. Good merning." "Hold," says the merchant, "den't go off in that way. I want to sell you that coat. I have some payments to make and I want the money. Come now, how much will you give for that coat?" "Well,," says the enstomer, "I will split the difference. asked twenty dollars, and I said ten. Now, I will give you fifteen." "Well," says the merchant, "it's a great sacrifice, but take it at that price." Then Solomon saw the cus-tomer with a roll under his arm start and go out and enter his own place of business, and Solomon in disguise followed him. He heard the customer as he unrolled the cost say: "Boys, I have made a great bargain. How mach do your guess I gave for that coat?" "Well," says one, wishing to compliment his enterprise, "you gave $30 for it." Another says: "I should think you got it cheap if you gave $25." "No," says the buyer in triumph, "I got it for $15. I beat him down and pointed out the imperfections, until I really made him believe it was not worth hardly anything. It takes me to make a bargain. Ha! ha!" Oh man, you got the goods for less than they were worth by positive falseheed; and no wonder, when Solomon went back to his palace and had put off his disguise, that he sat down at his writing-desk and made for all ages a crayon out and enter his own place of business, and his writing-desk and made for all ages a crayon his writing-desk and made for all ages a crayon eketch of you: "It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer, but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth."

There are no higher styles of men in all the world than those now at the head of merchandise in Brooklyn and New York and in the other great cities of this continent. Their representations is good as a bond with piles. other great cities of this continent. Their casual promise is as good as a bond with piles of collaterals. Their reputation for integrity is as well established as that of Petrarch residing in the family of Cardinal Colonna, and when there was great disturbance in the family the cardinal called all his people together, and put then under cath to tell the truth, except Petrarch, for, when he came up to swear, the cardinal put away his book and said, "As to you, Petrarch, your word is sufficient." Never since the world stood have there been so many merchants whose transactions can stand the test of the Ten Commandments. Such bargainmakers are all the more to be hemored because they have withstood, year after year, temptamakers are all the more to be honored because they have withstood, year after year, tempta-tions which have flung many so flat, and flung them so hard they can never recover them-selves. While all positions in life have pow-erful besetments to evil, there are specific forms of allurement which are peculiar to each occupation and profession, and it will be use-ful to weak of the neculiar temperatures of ful to speak of the peculiar temptations of

First, as in the scene of the text, business First, as in the scene of the text, business men are often tempted to sacrifice plain truth, the seller by exaggrating the value of goods, and the buyer by depreciating them. We cannot but admire an expect salesman. See how he first induces the customer into a mood favorable to the proper consideration of the value of the goods. He shows himself to be an honest and frank salesman. How carefully the lights are arranged until they fall just right upon the fabric! Beginning with goods of medium quality, he gradually advances towards those of more thorough make, and of wards those of more thorough make, and of more attractive pattern. How he watches the moods and whims of his customer! With what perfect calmness he takes the order and bows the purchaser from his presence, who goes away having made up his mind that he has bought the goods at a price which will allow him a living margin when he again sells them. The goods were worth what the salesman raid they were, and were sold at a price which will not make it necessary for the house to fail every ten years in order to fix up things. But with what burning indignation we think wards those of more thorough make and of

But with what burning indignation we think of the iniquitous stratagems by which goods are sometimes disposed of. A glance at the morning papers shows the arrival at one of our hotels of a young merchant from one of the inland cities. He is a comparative stranger in the great site. in the great city, and, of course, he must be shown around, and it will be the duty of some of our enterprising houses to escort him. He is a large purchaser and has plenty of time and money, and it will pay to be very attentive. The evening is spent at a place of doubtful amusement. Then they go back to the hotel. Having just come to the payer that the state of the s Having just come to town, they must, of course, drink. A friend from the same mercantile establishment drops in, and usage and generosity suggest that they must drink. Business prospects are talked over, and the stranger is warned against certain dilapidated mercantile establishments that are about to fail, and for such kindness and magnanimity of cautiou against the dishonmagnanimity of caution against the dishon-esty of other business houses, of course it is ex-pected they will—and so they do—they take a drink. Other merchants lodging in adjoining rooms find it hard to sleep for the clatter of decaution, and the course corousal of these rooms find it hard to sleep for the clatter of decanters, and the coarse carousal of these "hail fellows well met;" waxes louder. But they sit not all night at the wine cup. They must see the sights. They stagger forth with cheeks flushed and eyes bloodshot. The outer gates of hell open to let in the victims. The wings of lost souls fift among the lights, and the steps of the carousers sound with the rumbling thunders of the damned. Earewell to all the sanctities of home! Could mother, sister, father, slumbering sin the inland home. In the sanctities of home: Could mother, sixer, father, slumbering in the inland home, in some vision of that night catch a glimpse of the ruin wrought they would rend out their hair by the roots and bite the tongue till the blood spurted, shricking out: "God save him!"
What, suppose you, will come upon such at, suppose you, will come upon such ess establishments? and there are hundusiness establishments? and there are hundreds of them in the cities. They may beast of fabulous sales, and they may have an unprecedented run of buyers, and the name of the house may be a terror to all rivals, and from this thrifty root there may spring upbranch houses in other cities, and all the partners of the firm may move into their mansions and drive their full-blooded span, and the families may sweep the street with the most elegant appared that human are ever wore, or elegant apparel that human art ever wore, or earthly magnificence ever achieved. But a curse is gathering somewhere for those men, and if it does not seize hold of the pillars and in one wild ruin bring down the temple of commercial glory, it will break up their peace, and they will tremble with sickness and bloat with dissipations, and, pushed to the peace, and they will tremble with stekness and bleat with dissipations, and, pushed to the precipice of this life they will try to hold back, and cry for help, but no help will come, and they will clatch their gold to take it along with them, but it will be snatched from their grasp, and a voice will sound through their soul, "Not a farthing, thou beggared spirit!" And the judgment will come and they will stand a plast before it, and all the business iniquities of a life time will gather around them, saying, "Do you remember this?" and, "Do you remember that?" And elerks that they compelled to dishonesty, and runners and draymen and bookkeepers who saw behind the scenes, will bear testimony to their nefarious deeds, and some virtuous soul that once stood aghast at the splender and power of these business men will say, "Alas! this is all that is left of that great firm that occupied a block with their merchandise and overshadowed the city with their influence, and made righteousuess and truth and purity fall under the galling fire of avarice and crime."

and truth and purity fall under the galling fire of avarice and crime."

While we admire and approve of all acuteness and tact in the sale of goods, we must conderm any process by which a fabric or product is represented as possessing a value which it really does not have. Nothing but sheer falsehood can represent as perfection boots that rip, silks that speedily lose their luster, calicoes that immediately wash out, stoves that crack under the first hot fire, books insufficiently bound, carpets that unravel, old furniture rejuvenated with putty and glue and sold as having been recently manufactured, gold watches made out of brass, barrels of fruit, the biggest apples on top; wine additerated with strychnine, hosiery poorly woven, cloths of domestic manufacture shining with foreign labels, imported goods represented as rare and hard to get, because foreign exchange is so high, rolled out on the counter with matchless display. Imported indeed! but from the factory in the next street. A pattern already unfushionable and unsalable paimed off as a new print upon some country merchant who has come to town to make his first purchase of dry goods and going home with a large stock of goods warranted to keep.

Again, business men are often tempted to make the habits and customs of other traders their law of rectitude. There are commercial usages which will not stand the test of the make the habits and customs of other traders their law of rectitude. There are commercial usages which will not stand the test of the last day. Yet men in business are apt to do as their neighbors do. If the majority of the traders in any locality are lax in principle, the commercial code in that community will be spurious and dishonest. It is a hard thing to stand close by the law of right when your next door neighbor by his looseness of dealing is enabled to sell goods at a cheaper rate ard decoy your customers. Of course you will enabled to sell goods at a cheaper rate ard de-coy your customers. Of course you will promptly meet all your business engagements, paying when you promise to pay, will find it hard to compete with that merchant who is hopelessly in debt to the importer for the goods purchased, and to the landlord whose store he occupies, and to the clerks who serve him.

There are a hundred practices prevalent in There are a hundred practices prevalent in the world of traffic which onglit never to be-come the rule for honest men. Their wrong does not make your right. Sin never becomes virtue by being multiplied and admitted at brokers' board or merchants' exchange. Bebrokers' board or merchants' exchange. Because others sunggie a few things in passenger trunks, because others take usury when men are in tight places, because others deat in fancy stocks, because others palm off worthless indorsements, because others do nothing but blow bubbles, do not, therefore, be overcome of temptation. Hollow pretension and fictitious credit, and commercial gambling may awhite prosper, but the day of reckoning cometh, and in addition to the horror and condemnation of outraged communities, the curse of God will come, blow after blow. God's will forever and forever is the only standard of right and wrong, and not commercial ethics.

forever is the only standard of right and wrong, and not commercial ethics.

Young business man, avoid the first business dishonor, and you will avoid all the rest. The captain of a vessel was walking near the mouth of a river when the tide was low, and there was a long stout anchor chain, into one of the great links of which his foot slipped, and it began to swell and he could not withdraw it. The tide began to rise. The chain could not be loosened nor filed off in time, and a surgeon was called to amputate the limb, but before the work could be done, the tide rolled over the victim, and his life was gone. And I have to tell you, young man, that itst rolled over the victim, and his life was gone. And I have to tell you, young man, that just one wrong into which you slip may be a link of a long chain of circumstances from which you cannot be extricated by any ingenuity of your own, or any help from others, and the tides will roll over you as they have over many. When Pompey, the warrior, wanted to take possession of a city, and they would not open the gates, he persuaded them to admit a sick soldier. But the sick soldier after a while got well and strong, and he threw open the gates and let the devastating army come in. One wrong admitted into the soul may gain in strength until, after a while, army come in. One wrong admitted into the soul may gain in strength until, after a while, it flings open all the avenues of the immortal nature, and the surrender is complete.

Again, business men are sometimes tempted to throw off personal responsibility upon the monied institution to which they belong. Directors in banks and railroad and insurance companies sometimes shirk personal responsibility underneath the action of the corporation. And how often, when some banking house or financial institution explodes through house or financial institution explodes through fraud, respectable men in the board of direc-tors say. "Why, I thought all was going on in an honest way, and I am utterly confounded with this misdemeanor!" The banks, and the fire and life and marine insurance companies. and the railroad companies, will not stand up for judgment in the last day, but those who in them acted righteously will receive, each for himself, a reward, and those who acted the part of neglect or trickery will, each for him-self, receive a condemnation. Unlawful divi-dends are not clean before God because there are these associated with you who grab just as big a pile as you do. He who countenances the dishonesty of the firm, or of the corporation, or of the association, takes upon himself all the moral liabilities. If the financial institution steal, he steals. If they go into wild specula-tions, he himself is a gambler. If they need tions, he himself is a gambler. If they need-lessly embarrass a creditor, he himself is guilty of cruelty. If they swindle the un-initiated, he himself is a defrauder. No financial institution ever had a money vault strong enough, or credit stannch enough, or dividends large enough, or policy acute enough to hide the individual sins of its members. The old adage, that cor-porations have no souls, is misleading. Every corporation has as many souls as it has mem-bers.

Again, many business men have been Again, many business men have been tempted to postpone their enjoyments and duties to a future season of entire leisure. What a sedative the Christian religion would be to all our business men if, instead of postponing its uses to old age or death, they would take it into store or factory, or worldly engagements now! It is felly to go amid the uncertainties of business life with no God to help. A merchant in a New England willow. uncertainties of business life with no Ged to help. A marchant in a New England village was standing by a horse, and the horse lifted his foot to stamp it in a pool of water, and the merchant, to escape the splash, stepped into the door of an insurance agent, and the agent said, "I suppose you have come to renew your fire insurance?" "Oh," said the merchant, "I had forgotten that." The insurance was renewed, and the next day the house that had been insured was burned. Was it all accidental that the merchant, to escape a splash from a horse's foot, stepped into the insurance office? No, it was providential. And what a mighty solace for a business man to feel that things are providential. What peace and equiliare providential! What peace and equili-brium in such a consideration, and what a grand thing if all business men could realize

Many, although now comparatively straight Many, although now comparatively straightened in workly circumstances, have a goodly establishment in the future planned out. They have in imagination built about twenty years ahead a house in the country not difficult of access from the great town, for they will often have business, or old accounts to settle, and investments to look after. The house is large enough to accommodate all their friends. The halls are wide, and lung with pictures of hunting-scenes and a branch of antiers, and are comfortable with chairs that can be rolled out on the verande when the weather is invithunting-scenes and a branch of antlers, and are comfortable with chairs that can be rolled out on the verands when the weather is inviting, or set out under some of the oaks that stand sentinel about the house, and rustling in the cobl breeze, and songful with the robens. There is just land enough to keep them interested, and its crops of almost fabulions richness springing up under application of the best theories to be found in the agricultural journals. The farm is well stocked with cattle and horses, and sheep that know the voice and have a kindly bleat when one goes forth to look at them. In this blissful abode their children will be instructed in art and science and religion. This shall be the old homestead to which the boys at college will direct their letters, and the hill on which the house stands will be called Oakwood or Ivy Hill or Pleasant Retreat or Eagle Eyrle. May the future have for overy business man here all that and more beside! But are you postponing your happiness to that time? Are your algorithming your joys to that consummation?

Suppose that you achieve all you expectand the vision. I mention is not up to the reality, because the fountains will be brighter, the house grander, and the scenery more picturesque—the mistake is none the less fatal. What charm will there be in rural quiet for a mean who has thirty or forty years been conforming his entire mature to the excitements of business? Will flocks and herds, with their bleat and moan, be able to silence the insatiable spirit of acquisitiveness which has for years had full swing in the soul? Will the hum of the breeze soothe the man who now can find his only enjoyment in the stock market? Will leaf and cloud and fountain charm the eye that has for three-fourths of a life time found its chief beauty in hogsheads and bills of sale? Will parents be competent to rear their children for high and holy purpose, if their infancy and boyhood and girlbood were neglected, when they are almost ready to enter upon the world and have all their habits fixed and their principles stereotyped? No, no; now is the time to be happy. Now is the time to serve your Creator. Now is the time (to be a Christian. Are you too busy? I have known men as busy as you are who had a place in the store-loft where they went to pray. Some one asked a Christian sailor where he found any place to pray in. He said: "I can always find a quiet place at masthead." And in the busiest day in the season, if your heart is right, you can find a place to pray. Broadway and Fulton street are good places to pray in as you go to meet your various engagements. Go home a little earlier and get introduced to your children, Be not a galley-slave by day and night, lashed fast to the car of business. Let every day have its hour for worship and intellectual culture and recreation. Shew yourself greater than your business. Act not as though after death your manhood before the perpetual fires of anxiety. With every yard of cloth you sell, throw not in your scul to boot. Use firkin and counting room deak and hardware crate-gas the step to glorious usefulness and Christian character. Decide once and forever who shall be master in your store, you or your business.

Again, business men are often tempted to the their calling interfere with the interests of orever who shall be master in your store, you or your business.

Again, business men are often tempted to at their calling interfere with the interests of the soul. God sends men into the business world to get educated, just as boys are sent to school and college. Purchase and sale, loss and gain, disappointment and rasping, prosperity, the distinctesty of others, panic and bank suspension, are but different lessons in the school. The more business, the more means of grace. Many have gone through wildest panic unhurt. "Are you not afraid you will break?" said some one to a merchant in time of great commercial excitement. He replied, "Aye, I shall break when the fiftieth Psalm breaks, in the fifteenth verse, 'call upon me in the day of trouble and I will deliver thee.'"

The store and the counting-house have developed some af the most stalwart characters.

veloped some af the most stalwart characters. Perhaps originally they had but little spright-liness and force, but two or three hard business thumps awoke them up from their lethargy, and there came a thorough development in their hearts of all that was good and holy and energetic and tremendous, and they have become the front men in Christ's great army, as well as light-houses in the great world of traffic. But business has been perpetual depletion to many a man. It first pulled out of him all benevolence, next all amiability, next all religious aspiration, next all conscience, and veloped some af the most stalwart characters all religious aspiration, next all conscience, and though he entered his vocation with large heart and noble character he goes out of it a skeleton, enough to scare a ghost goes out of it a skeleton, enoughto iscare a ghost.

Men appreciate the importance of having a good business stand, a store on the right side of the street or in the right block. Now every place of business is a good stand for spiritual culture. God's angels hover over the world of traffic to sustain and build up those who are trying to do their duty. Tomorrow, if in your place of worldly engagement you will listen for it, you will hear a sound louder than the rattle of drays and the shuffle of feet and the chink of dollars, stealing into your soul, saying: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all other things shall be added unto you." Yet some of those sharpest at a bargain are cheated out of their immortal blessedness by stratagems more palpable than at a bargain are cheated out of their immortal blessedness by stratagems more palpable than any "drop game" of the street. They make investments in things everlastingly below par. They put their valuables in a safe not fire-proof. They give full credit to influences that will not be able to pay one cent on a dollar. They plunge into a labyrinth from which no bankrupt law or "two-thirds emactment" will ever extricate them. They take into their partnership the world, the flesh and the devil, and the enemy of all righteousness will boast through eternal ages that the man whoin all his business life could not be outwitted or over-reached, at last tumbled into spirit ted or over-reached, at last tumbled into spirit ual defalcation, and was swindled out of Perhaps some of you saw the fire in New York in 1835. Aged men tell us that it beggered all description. Some stood on the house-tops of Brooklyn, and looked at the red ruin that swept down the streets, and threatened to obliterate the metropolis. But the commercial world will yet be startled. But the commercial world will yet be startled by a greater configration, even the last. Bills of exchange, policies of insurance, mortgages and bonds and government securities, will be consumed in one lick of the flame. The bourse and United States mint will turn to ashes. Gold will run moiten into the dust of the street. Exchanges and granite blocks of mer-chandise will fall with a crash that will make the earth tremble. The flashing-up of the great light will show the righteous the way to their thrones. Their best treasures in heaven, they will go up and take possession of them. The toils of business life, which racked their brain and rasped their nerves for so many years, will have forever ceased. "There the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary

"MENTAL SCIENCE.

A TOPIC OF INTEREST TO LONG-HAIRED "THOUGHT-THINKERS."

The Mental Attitude Toward a Given Subject Governs the Nerve-Centers-Stop Thinking and You Will Stop Acting.

REOOKLYN, N. Y., April 13.—[Special.]—A lady in Savannah who has been under the care of a professional "mental scientist," submits a question which is sufficiently interestits to be discussed in this public correspon-

"Do you think," she asks in straight-forward English, "that one can, by an effort of the will, prevent coffee from keeping one awake at fight? I am particularly fond of "after-dinner coffee, and the lady who has been treating me says, "drink the coffee for it is not the coffee that keeps you awake, but your mental attitude toward the coffee. It is simply a thought, and if you do not allow yourself to think that thought, you will drink your coffee and sleep as usual.'

I have been treated to a goodly amount of this same kind of stuff, and as far as I can judge, it is unadulterated nonsense. It certainly will not bear a logical test, and has only an unsupported theory to recommend it. The effect of coffee is exceedingly marked on certain organisms. It stimulates the nerves and brightens the intellect. A strong cup of coffee has helped many a weary sick-bed watcher through the trying nights, and made it possible for the flagging faculties of a it possible for the flagging faculties of a penny-a-liner to write the story which brought the bread for the child-dren. On some persons coffee has apparently no effect, but a strong cup of tea in their cases will produce the same stimulating results. To say that these effects are brought about by a belief that they will be produced, is to accuse human nature of more imbecility than really belongs to it. We are all unobservant and illogical and foolish enough, and perhaps generally fail to charge effects to their proper causes, but I know the nerve thrill, the beautiful waking up wrought on me by a cup of coffee, and it is an insult to my intelligence to tell me that this intellectual spring is the result of a thought. What next I wonder in the way of foolishness. I would like to ask these theorists why the sleep which follows a dose of morphine, or the unconsciousness coming after the inhalation of ether or chloroform, is not the result of a thought. One conclusion is exactly as logical as the other. So I say to my friends who cannot drink coffee at night without abthe other. So I say to my friends who cannot drink coffee at night without subwho cannot drink coffee at night without sub-sequent wakefulness, let the cup of dissipation pass you by. The momentary enjoyment and the pleasant effects of this beverage cannot surely make up for the loss of a night's sleep. Banish everything, turn a cold shoulder to everything that interferes with this most nec-essary rest. Good sleep is the foundation of good health.

There are, unfortunately, many innocent sufferers from insomnia. They do not drink coffee, neither do they indulge in any nerve stimulant. They simply cannot sleep. Various remedies have from time to time been prescribed for this most unhappy and dangerous condition, and once in a while we hear of something that seems to possess real efficacy. In talking over this matter with one of our most distinguished physicians, I was informed ost distinguished physicians, I was informed most distinguished physicians, I was informed that in his opinion a great deal of insomnia is produced by taking to bed the tangles and perplexities of the day. A mother surrounded by her family has no time to think out the problem of daily living; the business man full of schemes and ambition, and threatened with reverses, convert than his the business man full of schemes and ambition, and threatened with reverses, cannot plan his campaign surrounded by his clerks and customers. The fine points are all saved till the lights are out and the house is quiet. The habit of drinking intoxicating liquors or of using tobacco is not more quickly contracted than the habit of sleeplessness, my doctor told me, and when once acquired is the most difficult of all habits to overcome. Now, while I cannot agree with the mental healers in their theories of thought-causes, I am a stanch believer in the power of the will, and so when this physician told me that he had seen scores of chronic insomnia permanently cured by turning off the thought currents simultaneously with the gas or the lamp in one's bedroom, it seemed to me there might be a good deal in the idea.

"How is it done?" I asked.

"Let us take a man," he replied, "who is

"How is it done?" I asked.

"Let us take a man," he replied, "who is thoroughly aware of his danger and is anxious to do all he can to secure sleep. I say to this man, when you go into your bed room determine to stop thinking. By a little mental skill you can reject an instrusive thought. This may be at first only to make place for norther, but the second can be discreaded in another, but the second can be disposed of i the same manner, and after awhile by refusin the same manner, and after awhile by refusing to harbor any one thought, the pictures upon the mind grow mixed and ka-leidoscopic, and then follows the passivity which produces comfortable slumber. The experimenter must not grow weary in thus keeping guard over the door of his mind. for a few nights of such picket duty will, in the majority of cases, bring splendid results. The secret of it is not to allow one thought an instant's entertainment. I wish there were some words that would describe the action of the mind in chasing these thoughts. Some-body, sometime, will give the recipe with as much ease as a good cook tells how her soup is

The doctor then added the following excel-lent advice: "Tell your readers who suffer from insomnia that while endeavoring to keep their minds a blank, to roll the ever this being the natural position of the eyes in sleep. This is one of the most direct invitations to the drowsy god, and one of the most difficult to decline."

A Decided Improvement.

A generation or two ago, in the days of homespun clothing, when our forefathers began to save up their old-fashioned clocks for grand, children to talk about, every spring it was the custom for whole families to take frequent and liberal doses of sulphur and molasses to "purify the blood." Fortunate are the people of today that they escape this nauseating mixtoday that they escape this nauseating mix-ture, and can take instead that agreeable and officacious medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla. This is a scientific preparation which goes to the right spot, thoroughly purifies the blood, and dispels "that tired feeling," an expression which accurately describes the condition of thousands who will not confess that they are sick, but yet have no enjoyment of food or occupation and just feel real miserable or "dragged out." Hood's Sarsaparilla imparts such strength of mind and body as to make one feel "like a new person."

STANLEY'S IRON RULE IN AFRICA.

His Theatrical Style in Dealing Alleged Rebel.

Thomas Stevens gives in the New York World this report of a conversation he had with Henry M. Stanley with Henry M. Stanley:

"Of course I wanted to give all of Emin's people who desired to come "out with us a chance to come in, and for this purpose we camped at Kavalis, at the southwest corner of Albert Nyanza, from February 14 to May 8. To this camp Emin's people began to flock in, among them a number of officers and Soudanese soldiers. Among these officers Johnson pointed out to me rebels who were known to have been plotting against him. He kept a sharp eye on these gentlemen and soon discovered that they were tampering with our men and conspiring against us in our own camp. I once had the ringleader put under arrest. On him we found criminating correspondence, proving concluriminating correspondence, proving conclu-sively that he was in the Mahdist plot to capture us all.

"At this time I was about reduced to a skeleton by my second attack of gastritis. I ordered a court martial to try him. He was found guilty on every count. I was in my tent on the flat of my back, so weak and emaciated I could'nt sit up. I mad them prop me up in a chair outside, however, and I swallowed a bracing tonic to strengthen me to the task of pronouncing sentence on this villain. I determined to make such an example out of him that there would be no further conspiracy in our camp at any rate.

"They brought him before me. The people stood around in silence. I looked at him and mustered what little strength I had to address him: 'We came through a thousand difficulties and have risked our lives a hundred times to save and success you and now in return for to save and succor you, and now, in return for all we have passed through for your sake, what do you do? You conspire in our own camp to have us taken as slaves to Khartoum! A court martial of white men and of your own com-rades has given you a fair trial and you have been found guilty on every count—depart to God?

"The people were so wrought upon by these words, and the whole scene," said Mr. Stanley, "that they rushed at him as one man and seized him.

seized him.

"'What shall we do with him?' they shouted. 'What shall we do with him?' and I pointed to the limb of a tree.

"The next minute a rope was around his neck, and a hundred willing hands were hauling him up, running away with the rope.

"Yow you see,' I cried, addressing the rest of the Ecyntians, 'now you see you are not in.

"'Now you see,' I cried, addressing the rest of the Egyptians, 'now you see you are not in Waldelai. There will be no coaxing, no pating on the back with me. I'll hang every traitor among you I can lay hands on!"

The above must have been a fine piece of tragedy to have witnessed. It was something even to hear Mr. Stanley repeat it in our peaceful camp at Msuwa, where we halted a day at the special request of Baron von Gravenreuthe It was the first time I knew Mr. Stanley to be a first class tragedian.
